Senate GOP Fights New Set-Up for Crime Quiz

Floor Battle Looms Over Special Unit That Would Omit Donnell, Ferguson

By Chalmers M. Roberts
Post Reporter

Senate Republican leaders decided yesterday to wage a floor fight against the proposed special Senate Crime Investigating Committee.

Senator Taft (R., Ohio), chairman of the GOP Policy Committee, said the group indorsed the "general idea" of the original Kefauver resolution as approved by the Senate Judiciary Committee but which Democratic leaders on Tuesday agreed to kill in favor of the special unit.

Taft said the Republican leaders "regret the growing tendency on the part of the Democratic leadership to select the Republican members of committees."

He said the leaders specifically opposed elimination of Senators Donnell (R., Mo.) and Ferguson (R., Mich.), which would be accomplished by setting up the new group. One or both would serve if the Judiciary resolution were approved by the Senate. Taft called the two "the Senators who know the most about it."

Donnell will make a fight for the original resolution, Taft said, and the GOP leaders will back him.

A foretaste of that fight came yesterday from Republican Senators Kem (Mo.) and Brewster (Me.). Kem told the Senate the recent Kansas City slayings of Charles Binaggio, Democratic political leader, and a former convict associate demonstrated "the close liaison between politics and the underworld" in that city.

Kem charged there is an "unholy alliance" between crime and politics and he again called on President Truman to solve the 1946 vote fraud case as a step towards ending the alliance.

Brewster told reporters the Democrats have been forced into a crime probe because of the slayings. He said the "Kansas City developments made it too hot for them to delay any longer."

Senator Kefauver (D., Tenn.), who is expected to head the special committee, yesterday drafted the proposed substitute resolution. Majority Leader Lucas has promised to take up the probe authorization as soon as the Senate completes its pending business, perhaps late this week or early next week.

Kefauver said yesterday his substitute is "substantially the same" as his original Judiciary resolution as to scope of the proposed investigation. It would grant $150,000 for the committee and order it to report by January 31, 1951, and to wind up its business by February 28, 1951.

On the floor, Kefauver said in reply to Kem that he felt Kansas City and some other cities—he carefully did not name them—ought to be among the very first at which the committee takes a look.

Meanwhile, the Interstate Commerce Committee yesterday suddenly voted out the bill to ban interstate shipment of slot machines.

This measure, submitted by the

Chrysler Strike To End by Monday, Observers Think

Detroit, April 12 (AP).—An end of the 78-day-old Chrysler strike by Monday was foreseen today by observers.

Sources close to both the CIO United Auto Workers and Chrysler negotiators say they are driving toward a top-level settlement by Saturday, a code on ratification by local unions Sunday, and a resumption of work Monday.

Neither company nor union spokesmen, however, would comment on progress.

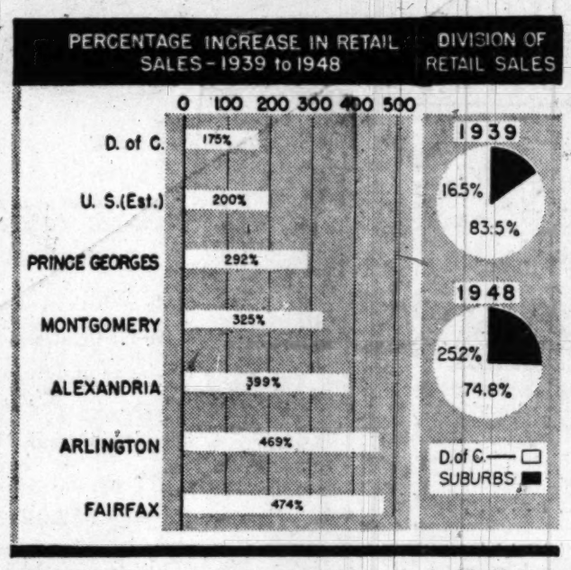
Area Business Booms . . .



SUBURBS GROW—Expansion of retail trade in the Washington area is shown in above chart. Figures are based on the 1948 Census of Business, released yesterday. The dollar volume increase for the entire Metropolitan Washington area was 207 percent

Suburbs Spurt as Retail Trade Of D. C. Area Triples in Decade

Twenty-five cents of every dollar spent in retail stores in the Washington metropolitan area goes into cash registers in the city's suburbs where only 16½ cents went in 1939.

This and other figures on the spectacular suburban business boom of the 1939-1948 decade were made public yesterday with the release of data from the Census Bureau's 1948 census of business.

Here are other major facts disclosed:

1. While the dollar volume of retail trade in the District rose 175 percent in the 1939-48 period, the volume for the surrounding sections rose a phenomenal 368 percent. Increase for the entire metropolitan area was 207 percent.

2. The District's increase of 175 percent was below the estimated national increase of 200 percent but every other part of the Washington metropolitan area exceeded the national average.

3. Suburban retail, wholesale and service stores in 1948 employed 23,215 of the area's 125,484 workers while in 1939 the suburbs employed only 10,419 out of 84,986. The suburban share jumped from 11 percent of the total to 18 percent.

This business trend to the suburbs, evident to businessmen and customers alike in recent years, underscores the population trend to be shown by the 1950 census, now being taken. The city proper now includes almost 900,000 persons with at least 600,000 more in the suburbs, it is estimated, or a ratio of 60 to 40. (In 1940 the ratio was 68 to 32.)

The business figures announced yesterday are the result of the census which covered calendar 1948. William C. Truppner, boss of that census, said yesterday he thought there would be little difference as of today in the city-suburban relationship but that the trend of the past decade is continuing.

While the new figures make clear the trend of the area's growth, they by no means present a picture of a dying city at the area's center. For the District of Columbia still is the scene of the bulk of the area's retail business (75 percent though it contains only 60 percent of the population), and has improved its position in the nine-year period as the center of wholesale transactions. Wide Business Gains Reported For 1st Quarter

By The Associated Press

The President's Council of Economic Advisers yesterday told Congress there had been an upturn in virtually every business index in the first quarter of 1950.

Industrial output bounced back in March; it more than made up the losses of the coal strike. Home building set a record. National income, which means buying power, rose after falling in each quarter of 1949.

But the council's acting chairman, Leon Keyserling, told a reporter that the gains still fail to show an economic growth rapid enough to prevent a slow, year-by-year rise in joblessness.

Not Enough Expansion

"We are not getting the expansion in industry and investment that we need to absorb the steady increase in the labor force," Keyserling said. "That is a serious problem."

The council's monthly report to Congress, "Economic Indicators," noted a March drop of 551,000 in the number of jobseekers, but said the improvement was "seasonal."

Most of the economic signposts, as reported to the Joint Economic Committee of Congress, were pointed upward.

Production of all goods and services reached an annual rate of 258 billion dollars in the first quarter, up nearly three billion dollars from late last year but not yet back to the level of a year ago when the skid began.

Spending at Peak Rate

A "sharp rise" in consumers' spendable income, or earnings after taxes, was attributed largely to the $2,800,000,000 GI life insurance refund—most of which, the council said, "was not spent in the first quarter."

Consumer spending rose to an all-time peak rate of 181 billion dollars a year. This represented a modest gain of $1,200,000,000 for the quarter, and indicated that most veterans were spending their refund checks prudently. "Consumer saving," said the report, "was temporarily high."

The stock market was strong throughout March. "Most stock prices," said the council, "were higher than at any time since the 1946 peak."

Profits of corporations in the first quarter were at an annual rate

Squalls Halt Baltic Hunt For Fliers

Copenhagen, April 12 (AP). Fliers hunting for life rafts from a missing United States Navy plane spotted yellow objects and an oil slick on the squall-flecked Baltic Sea today, but a concerted search of the area ended with negative results.

At least one of the yellow objects turned out to be a 3-foot-long storage box used by Baltic fishermen.

Bad weather interrupted the quest tonight. The score or more of air crews planned to take off again at dawn in the search for traces of the plane, a 4-engined Privateer that vanished with its 10-man crew Saturday on a flight from Wiesbaden, Germany, to Copenhagen.

A search B-17 piloted by Capt. Banta M. York of Raleigh, N. C., circled over the seas off Bornholm Island for six hours today to mark the "target area" for other planes and surface craft. It returned to Copenhagen when its fuel ran low.

'Dropped Everything'

"I dropped everything except the kitchen sink into the sea to keep flying as long as possible," York said.

The hunt drew newspaper criticism in Soviet Russia, which protested yesterday that a United States bomber of the B-29 type exchanged shots with a Soviet fighter over Latvia Saturday and then headed toward the Baltic. The theme was that the search was just an excuse to conduct aerial maneuvers off Soviet territory.

American officials have indicated a belief the Russians might be referring to the Privateer, which resembles a B-29 in profile. But they said it was unarmed, that a flight to Latvia would have been more than 300 miles off its Wiesbaden-Copenhagen course and that it was under instructions to stay away from Soviet territory. The formal American answer to the Russian protest is still awaited.

United States Air Force officials were advised the B-17 search plane spotted four yellow objects. Navy escape equipment is colored yellow to give it high visibility against dark seas.

Called Them 'Debris'

The 31-year-old York referred to the objects as "debris" after he landed, but said one could have been a life raft. He dropped all his smoke flares at the scene, roughly half way between Bornholm and the Swedish naval base of Karlskrona.

"Just before I set course for Copenhagen," York said, "a Danish minesweeper reached the spot and picked up some of what I thought was debris. The Danes reported by radio that the first thing they picked up was a wooden box, used by fishermen for storing fish. What happened after then, I don't know."

York said he could not fly at less than 600 feet, and visibility was down to half a mile or so before he left.

Sergt. Winthrop Maddox of Griffin, Ga., a crewman, said:

"It looked like a life raft to me. It was partly submerged in the center of an oil slick. The yellow color showed up, and it looked like it might have been equipment off an airplane."

Key to Our City . . .

'Imperialism' In Americas Is Disclaimed By Gonzalez

Chilean President, Welcomed Here by 200,000, Speaks at Truman Dinner

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Reporter

President Truman welcomed President Gonzalez Videla of Chile to Washington yesterday, and later joined him in avowing that there is no "imperialism" on the American continent.

The thoughts of the two leaders were very much on Soviet Russia as they toasted each other with champagne at a State dinner in the Carlton last night.

President Gonzalez, a militant anti-Communist, whose government has broken off relations with Russia, said:

"On the American continent, there are no imperialistic nations, nor satellites. There are free nations, which direct their own destinies. . . ."

Toward Solidarity

President Truman, after presenting the Chilean statesman with a gold medallion struck off at the United States Mint, recalled the steps taken by the American republics at Rio de Janeiro and Bogota to achieve solidarity. He said he hoped they would be a contribution to world peace. Then, alluding to the North Atlantic Pact, he continued:

"We have absolutely reversed our early policy by alliances with European countries, hoping to maintain peace in the world.

"As the President knows, we have no aggressive intentions, we are not imperialists. We want to be good neighbors to our sister republics in the Western Hemisphere, and we want to be helpful to the other democratic countries in the world to attain a peace, and to maintain that peace."

President Gonzalez, a stocky, keen-eyed man of 50, who can outsmile even President Truman, got a welcome here that befitted the long friendship between this country and his own. Two hundred thousand persons, according to Police Superintendent Robert J. Barrett, turned out to wave and cheer.

Presidents Meet

The distinguished visitor from the Andes flew into Washington on Mr. Truman's blue-and-silver airplane, the Independence. In his entourage were Senora Gonzalez, the First Lady of Chile, and their daughter, Senora de Campos.

Mr. Truman, at last night's state dinner, described Senora Gonzalez as "beautiful," and the daughter as "lovely," and none who saw them dissented.

As President Gonzalez came down the gangplank of the Independence, smiling, President Truman moved forward to grasp his hand. Mrs. Truman and Miss Margaret Truman also were on the scene, as were cabinet officers and other high-ranking officials.

A squadron of Air Force jet fighters flashed overhead as the traditional honors were accorded President Gonzalez. After the 21-gun salute, the playing of the national anthems of the sister republics, and the present arms of

Tydings Blocks Ayer as Aide In Loyalty Quiz

By Alfred Friendly
Post Reporter

Senator Tydings (D., Md.) yesterday temporarily blocked the appointment of a Republican-nominated assistant counsel to his subcommittee investigating charges of Communist infiltration in the State Department.

The basis for his action, Tydings said, is information he received that the man concerned, Frederick Ayer, jr., of Wenham, Mass., is a candidate for the GOP nomination for attorney general in Massachusetts.

Ayer was proposed for the job of assistant counsel of Tydings' special Senate Foreign Relations subcommittee by Senator Lodge (R., Mass.). Another man proposed for a similar job by Senator Hickenlooper (Iowa), the other Republican member of the subcommittee, was accepted. He is Robert Morris, a New York attorney.

Lodge, at his home in Beverly, Mass., denounced the action on Ayer as "gross discourtesy and injustice."

Tydings said he is holding up Ayer's appointment because he feels "every effort should be made to keep politics out" of the investigation. He said he was advising Ayer not to come to Washington until the matter of his appointment could be put before the full subcommittee.

Tydings said in a statement handed reporters:

"I do not believe that candidates for office, either Democrats or Republicans, should serve as members of our staff. I shall certainly

Unknown World War II Hero To Be Enshrined Here in 1951

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

The unknown American servicemen of World War II will be selected in Philadelphia's historic Independence Hall, May 26, 1951, and entombed at Arlington with the Nation's highest honors four days later.

Plans for honoring America's unknown hero dead were announced yesterday by the Department of Defense. The ceremonies here will parallel in many respects those of 29 years ago when the Unknown Soldier of World War I was laid to rest.

But other features of next year's program will differ considerably from those in 1921. Final selection in Philadelphia will come from among six unidentified bodies brought home by Navy warship or Air Force plane from the six major theaters of war.

He may be a soldier, sailor, airman, marine or Coast Guardsman. His older comrade, now resting across the river, was called the "Unknown Soldier" and was picked from among four unidentified bodies taken from four United States Army cemeteries in France and was brought home aboard the USS Olympia, Admiral Dewey's flagship in 1898.

Here is the procedure outlined yesterday by the Defense Department:

A preliminary selection board named by the quartermaster general of the Army will select one principal unknown serviceman and five alternates from among the 8000 unidentified dead in 16 American cemeteries overseas. Capsules containing the code number of each unknown will be placed

Dewey Tells GOP to Stop Rocking Boat

Princeton, N. J., April 12 (AP).—Governor Thomas E. Dewey of New York tonight called on President Truman to set up a "genuine bipartisan" foreign policy and told his fellow Republicans to stop rocking the boat.

Dewey called on both major parties for "a supreme and unified effort" to save the world's freedom. He said the Nation should stop watching continuous Communist successes "with the calm of a Buddha contemplating his navel." The country's Capital, he said, now "conveys the impression of fiddling while freedom burns."

Dewey said a real bipartisan foreign policy would require "a radical improvement in the attitude of both the Democratic National Administration and sections of the Republican Party."

He said the Democratic Administration itself was to blame for past instances of Republican refusal to cooperate in bipartisan prosecution of the cold war.

"Where the Administration has put partisan concern first, there has been disunity, weakness and failure," Dewey said. "This, in turn, has led to a resurgence of isolationism and opened the door to attacks upon the personnel and policies of the Department of State."

But he cautioned fellow GOP leaders that "to any sincere offer of bipartisanship at a time like this, the Republican Party must of course respond."

"Before any Republican rejoices at the possible shipwreck of the foreign policy of the Democratic Administration," Dewey said, "he should remember that we are all in the same boat."

He said an "immediate and sincere" bipartisan policy was the Nation's greatest need in what he de-

Czech Employes Of U. S. Bureau Face Trial Today

Prague, April 12 (AP).—An undisclosed number of employes of the United States Information Services in Prague will go on trial Thursday at Pankrac Court.

An invitation to Western newspapermen to attend the trial was issued today. It did not say what the charges were, nor identify the accused.

Presumably those to be tried are Czech nationals employed by the USIS.

The official Czech news agency said Miss Ruzena Soumarova resigned her USIS job today following the resignation yesterday of a clerk, Ivan Elbel. Both issued statements denouncing their American employers.

Elbel charged USIS is supplying the Voice of America with "slanderous news about Czechoslovakia."

Duckett to Push Enforcement Of Anti-Red Law in Maryland

Baltimore, April 12 (AP).—Annapolis attorney and Army combat veteran O. Bowie Duckett today was named special assistant attorney general in charge of enforcing Maryland's Ober law.

Attorney General Hall Hammond announced the appointment.

He said Duckett's "training, balance, judgment and experience" fitted him "admirably" for the post.

Duckett, who practiced law in Annapolis with the firm of McWilliams, Duckett & Haley from 1932 to 1943, will assume his duties Monday. He is 46.

These duties include investigation of any subversive activities in Maryland, and supervision of Ober law enforcement generally.

The law provides for disbanding of subversive organizations and imposes severe penalties on persons advocating openly the violent overthrow of the Government.

Another requirement of the act is a loyalty oath as a prerequisite to State and public employment.

Candidates for public office also are required to swear to the loyalty pledges.

Duckett was born in Anne Arundel County, attended Annapolis High School, spent two years at the United States Naval Academy, and graduated from the University of Maryland law school in 1928.

He was a captain in the Judge Advocate General's Department in the Army and served in Australia, participating in the New Guinea and Philippine campaigns. He received the Asiatic-Pacific ribbon with four bronze service stars.

28 Senators Have Relatives On Office Payrolls in Year

An official Senate report disclosed yesterday that at least 28 Senators had close relatives on their office payrolls during the fiscal year that ended June 30, 1949.

The report—issued by Senate Secretary Leslie L. Biffle—did not disclose the amount of pay drawn by individual employes. It merely listed the names of each Senatorial employe per quarter plus the total amount paid out for the period by each Senator for his office staff.

One Senator — Arthur V. Watkins (R., Utah) — had one son, two daughters and a daughter-in-law on his payrool at varying times. Senator Dennis Chavez (D., N. M.) had a son and a daughter and the late Senator John H. Overton (D., La.) had two daughters working for him.

Employment of relatives by members of Congress is perfectly legal. Wives or other members of the family in many notable instances have been key figures in running important Congressional offices.

President Truman had his wife working for him when he was a member of the Senate. John Nance Garner was assisted by Mrs. Garner when he was Vice President and also as Speaker of the House

The official records do not show—and are not required to show—when and how Senators' employes put in their time. It is generally agreed that most of the relatives who draw pay have jobs to do.

A United Press survey in December showed that at least 90 of the 435 members of the House had

Polio Victim, 7, Lands Smiling After Flight of 8000 Miles

Plucky Scotty Chapin, 7, yesterday wound up an 8000-mile plane trip at Bolling Air Force Base, still smiling as he was lowered in his stretcher to begin polio treatment at Children's Hospital.

His mother, wife of Frank M. Chapin, charge d'affaires at the United States Embassy in Manila, reported he was in "good spirits" and "enjoyed the trip." The Chapins lived at Fairlington for three years before moving to Manila five months ago.

Accompanying Scotty most of the flight was his best friend, Joel Bryan, 12, another former Washingtonian, also suffering from polio.

Joel is the son of Dr. J. Y. Bryan, now cultural attache at the embassy, and before that director of the department of journalism at the University of Maryland. He joined the State Department in February, 1949. Joel was dropped at San Francisco for treatment there.

Scotty Chapin complained of a stiff neck and back on March 3. A few days later he was diagnosed as a polio case, with partial paralysis of the leg and spine, Mrs. Chapin said.

His case and Bryan's were among those in Manila's most serious polio outbreak. Four American children and eight Filipinos were hospitalized at Clark Field Hospital, run jointly by the Army and Air Force.

Scotty and Joel started back to America in an Air Force C-54 last Wednesday. Mrs. Chapin and an Air Force nurse, First Lieut.

Taft Wants Action On FEPC Bill Now

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

The Senate Republican high command yesterday called on Administration leaders to reverse their postponement of a civil rights showdown and predicted a Southern filibuster on the issue can be broken if the Senate acts soon.

Senator Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio), Senate GOP steersman, issued the challenge following a conference with his Senate Republican Policy Committee.

Said Taft:

"We feel that the action of the Democratic Policy Committee casts doubt on the good faith of the majority and on the future of the whole civil rights program."

The Ohio Republican referred to Tuesday's Democratic leadership decision to give the Marshall Plan authorization priority over the fair employment practices bill. The postponement was concurred in by the President.

Thinks Cloture Possible

Urging the Democratic leadership to "take up the (FEPC) bill immediately, as they stated they would just 10 days ago," Taft said further postponement would make it virtually impossible to break up a Southern filibuster.

Asked what he thought the prospects are of cutting off the Southern talk, under the so-called coalition rule requiring 64 votes for cloture, Taft said Republicans have been canvassing the possibility.

"I think that cloture can be secured," he told newsmen. "We can't say how many Republicans and how many Democrats will vote for it, but we feel there is a very good possibility of cloture."

He told reporters, however, that the showdown would involve three or four weeks of debate and two or more cloture motions. As a session-end proposition he said it had little chance of success because of House pressure for adjournment and because the Senate try would only be a "gesture."

Taft Changes Politics

Taft then repeated a GOP charge, previously denied by Democratic Leader Scott W. Lucas (Ill.)—that Tuesday's FEPC postponement was designed to put off the party-splitting debate until after the May 2 Florida and Alabama primaries.

"It was influenced by Democratic political considerations," he insisted, despite Lucas' denials. "They want the Southern primaries out of the way."

Organizations supporting the FEPC bill, which have cooperated with the Administration on FEPC strategy in the past, meanwhile bombarded the White House with sharply worded messages protesting the latest delay.

Roy Wilkins, acting secretary of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, wired President Truman that FEPC supporters are "shocked and dismayed." Wilkins requested a conference between the President and representative civil rights groups. His message continued:

Sees Fair Deal Imperiled

"Continued delay and evasion on the part of the Democratic leadership in the Senate not only forestalls enactment of this bill but imperils the entire Fair Deal program and vitiates the party's platform . . .

"My recent countrywide tour disclosed everywhere an increasing resentment against the failure of the Democratic leadership to enact the program on which it was elected while giving precedence to special interest legislation such as the Kerr natural gas bill . . ."

Elmer W. Henderson, director of the American Council on Human Rights, wired Truman that the postponement was a "set-back" for FEPC and "we are perplexed and dismayed."

"We ask you now to use your influence to have this policy reversed so that FEPC can be called up in its promised order," his telegram said.

Illinois Members Alerted

In a separate statement, Henderson said the determined fight promised by Lucas "can better be waged now than in the closing days of this session when appropriations and other bills are crowding the calendar."

"We are especially alerting the members of our organization who live in Illinois (where Lucas is up for reelection) to protest vigorously against this action."

Charles LaFollette, national director of Americans for Democratic Action, said the postponement situation would never have arisen if Democratic leaders had not insisted on bringing up the Kerr natural gas bill ahead of FEPC and ECA.

Currency Comptroller Shift Apparently Doomed in Senate

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

President Truman's Reorganization Plan No. 1, putting the Office of Comptroller of the Currency under the Secretary of the Treasury, seemed headed for certain Senate rejection yesterday after a battery of bankers opposed it.

Noting that the present Secretary of the Treasury, John W. Snyder, opposes the plan, the bankers expressed fears that "political incentives" might lead some future Treasury Secretary to "nationalize" the banks and "socialize our banking system." They testified before the Senate Executive Expenditures Committee.

Robert V. Fleming, president and board chairman of Riggs National Bank, appearing both for the American Bankers Association and for his own institution, noted that the plan would effect no saving of public funds.

The comptroller's office is maintained and its expenses are borne entirely by assessments against the national banks, which the comptroller supervises and examines, he pointed out. He said Congress deliberately made the term of office for the Senate-confirmed comptroller five years so that the office could be as free as possible from political considerations.

Fleming said the plan would permit the Treasury Secretary to shift the duties and responsibilities of Senate-confirmed officials to other individuals "that Congress did not intend should have such duties and responsibilities."

Robert L. L. McCormick, research director of the Citizens Committee for the Hoover Report, told the committee the entire Government reorganization program would be "wrecked" if the comptroller is not put into the Treasury Department. Defeat of this plan, he said, would open the door to rejection of other streamlining proposals.

Chairman John McClellan (D., Ark.) closed the hearings after McCormick's testimony, and said he would call an executive session of the committee Monday to consider what recommendation would be made to the Senate.

The committee can, he said, recommend Senate rejection or approval of the plan, or send it to the Senate without recommendation.

Senator William Benton (D., Conn.), only Senator on the committee apparently favoring the plan, told reporters after the hearing:

"It looks bad but I'm not giving up."

McClellan said the committee would speed its recommendation to the Senate because of the proviso that unless either House acts within 60 days of the time the plan was handed down it will become law.

Pace Becomes Head of Army; Gray, Departing Is Honored

Frank Pace, jr., 37-year-old attorney and public service career man, yesterday became Secretary of the Army.

He replaces Gordon Gray, to whom the Army yesterday paid an affectionate and ceremonious farewell. Gray resigned to become president of the University of North Carolina, but will serve as an assistant to President Truman for the next few months, studying solutions of the "dollar gap" problem.

Pace, fourth youngest Secretary to head the Army, was sworn in by Chief Justice Fred Vinson. Cabinet members, Congressmen and the top Pentagon "brass" were on hand, as well as Mrs. Pace and their two young daughters.

Former President Herbert Hoover sent a message of praise for Pace on his appointment. A telegram read by Defense Secretary Louis Johnson at the ceremony congratulated him on the "extraordinarily able associate" he had gained.

As Gray left the Pentagon, troops from Fort Myer and the Army Band were lined up for inspection. A large crowd was on hand to bid him goodby, and Secretary Johnson who earlier had thanked the retiring Secretary as a "bulwark of support," came out to shake his hand.

Viruses' Growth Reported Halted By New Method

Philadelphia, April 12 (NYHT). A Philadelphia chemist reported today that he had stopped the growth of viruses in an early stage of development.

Without promising quick conquest of such diseases as poliomelitis and common colds which are caused by virus particles, Dr. Seymour S. Cohen said the inhibition of virus formation brings science much closer to the eventual creation of chemicals able to combat such infections.

Dr. Cohen told an American Chemical Society meeting he was able to stop the viruses by treating them with substances similar to viruses but with no reproductive power of their own.

Senate Group Votes to Hold Rent Hearings

The Senate Banking Committee decided yesterday to hold speedy hearings on the dispute over extending Federal rent controls.

Chairman Maybank (D., S. C.) announced the decision after a conference with Senate Democratic Leader Lucas of Illinois and Housing Expediter Tighe Woods, whose office handles the controls.

Maybank said the hearings will begin April 24 and will be limited to four days. Foes and supporters of extension will be allowed two days each for testimony, he said.

The controls are due to end June 30 unless renewed. President Truman has urged extension several times.

Senate Rules Group Approves Bill to Curb Spending

A resolution aimed at curbing Federal spending was approved by the Senate Rules Committee yesterday.

The resolution, long advocated by Senator Wherry (R., Nebr.), provides for a Senate-House committee of 20 members to estimate by February 15 of each year the Government expenditures and income for the next fiscal year.

It is intended to pump new life into a requirement of the Congressional Reorganization Act of 1946. This act called for such a legislative budget early in each session as a guide to appropriations, separate from the President's budget recommendations.

The 1946 act directed that the estimate be made by the Senate and House committees handling appropriations and taxes. It has not worked out successfully, however, and no estimate has been made for the last two years.

One objection was that the joint committee was unwieldly because of its size. Wherry's resolution would cut down the size by limiting membership to 20.

Gonzalez, Truman Deny 'Imperialism'

a guard of honor, the two chief executives got into an open car, the famous old Sunshine Special.

They drove along the banks of the Potomac, gay with blossoms, and then into the city, where cries of "Bienvinedo!" and "Viva, Chile!" were mingled with the more familiar "'Ray!" and "Hi!"

Flags of Two Nations

Old Glory and the lone-star flag of Chile were whipping in the breeze all along the way, and there would have been 10,000 flags more but for an accident.

The plan was for 10,000 small Chilean flags and an equal number of American flags to be distributed to school children. However, when the shipment arrived last Monday, it was found that there was something wrong with the Chilean flag. The field or background, for the white star was supposed to be blue, but it turned out greenish.

There wasn't time to order a new batch of flags, according to Walter Kern, District electrical inspector, who was in charge of putting out the flags. Consequently, all the waving was done with American flags.

Mrs. Truman There

On the way into the city, during a stop at the Virginia end of the Arlington Memorial Bridge, the two First Ladies and Miss Truman transferred from a limousine to another famous old White House open car, the "Queen Mary."

Mrs. Truman wore a black Persian lamb coat, a blue dress-suit, and a black off-the-face straw hat. Senora Gonzalez was attired in a black broadcloth suit with white blouse, black pumps, and a small black off-the-face hat with velvet trimming. Miss Truman had on a navy blue dress coat, shoes to match, and a white straw hat with jutting white wings.

Senora Gonzalez, blonde, brown-eyed and chic, wore a heavy gold bracelet, which sparkled in the sun as she waved to the crowds.

Some of the youngsters along the way sent up whistles of admiration when they spotted Margaret Truman in her winged hat.

The climax of the downtown welcome came in front of the District Building, where Commissioner John Russell Young handed President Gonzalez a beribboned key to the city. A large crowd in Post Square saw the ceremony and cheered when the Chilean leader switched from Spanish to English to thank Commissioner Young.

The United States Marine Band, its members in brilliant red tunics, then stepped out in front of the motorcade, and led the way along Pennsylvania ave. to Blair House.

President Gonzalez and Senora Gonzalez showed great interest as stand before the honor guard made they passed the White House, with its scaffolding and other signs of reconstruction.

Chilly Spring Air

There was a nip in the spring air yesterday, and President Truman had on a topcoat when he set out for the airport. Secretary of State Acheson and other Cabinet officers were attired similarly.

President Gonzalez, having started out from Key West, was attired in a blue pin-stripe suit when he stepped from the Independence. Seeing this, Mr. Truman took off his topcoat when the time came to up of Army, Navy and Air Force detachments.

Mr. Truman, in his speech of welcome, mentioned the "traditional and warm friendship" between the United States and Chile, and added:

"It is a source of satisfaction that, in the spirit of friendly cooperation and inter-American solidarity, Chile and the United States are continuing their efforts to assure the security and peace of the world . . ."

President Gonzalez, in reply, said he believed it was "entirely fitting that the heads of democratic states establish direct contact in order to strengthen the bonds of international cooperation."

Morris Presents Roses

At the ceremony in front of the District Building, Chairman Edgar Morris of the citizens reception committee presented bouquets of red roses to Mrs. Truman and Senora Gonzalez.

President Gonzalez, in accepting the key to the city from Commissioner Young, said his long journey from Chile was a gesture of friendship—a visit of "one good neighbor to another good neighbor." Concluding, he switched to English to say, "Thank you, Mr. John Russell Young."

The state dinner last night was given at the Carlton because Blair House, temprorary home of the Trumans, is far too small for such an occasion.

President Gonzalez, who will be in Washington until Saturday, plans to remain in the United States 21 days. He intends to visit the Nation's business and industrial centers, its oil fields and irrigation and power projects.

But he had this to say at Key West yesterday, before flying to Washington:

"This is not a business trip, since I do not come to ask anything."

REVIEWS TROOPS—President Gonzalez and President Truman stride jauntily before the "present arms" of an honor guard after the visiting Executive had been greeted at the Airport with a 21-gun salute and the playing of the national anthem. The distinguished statesman's visit had been hailed as symbolic of the long friendship between the United States and Chile

Turkey Honors Dead Hero

Istanbul, April 12 (AP).—Turkey's national hero, Marshal Fevzi Cakmak, was buried today in a pageant of mourning unequaled here since that at the death of the late President Kemal Ataturk in 1938.

A touching tribute was added by a group of admirers who seized the marshal's coffin and bore it at the head of the funeral procession of 50,000 on the 10-mile march.

Another group hoisted the priest who had conducted the funeral services and carried him along behind the Marshal's body.

Approximately 500,000 persons lined the route.

There was no evidence of any new disturbances such as the riots which spread over the city yesterday in protest against what many felt was a lack of official consideration following the marshal's death April 10.

Cakmak, who helped drive the Greeks from Turkey during Ataturk's revolution, was one of the great heroes of modern Turkey. He stepped into politics four years ago and within two years he was leader of the opposition party and a bitter foe of President Ismet Inonu's government.

Although no day of mourning was proclaimed, all business in Istanbul came to a standstill. Shops, theaters and bars were closed. All flags flew at half-staff.

Russia Demands Italian Action On Fulfilling Reparation Pact

Rome, April 12 (AP).—Russia pressed Italy today for payments on her 100-million-dollar war reparations bill from current production. It declared payment must start in the near future.

The Italian Foreign Ministry said Italy cannot pay reparations until an agreement is reached on the value of Italian properties in the Balkans to be consigned to Russia.

Italy insists those assets—in Communist Romania, Hungary and Bulgaria—are worth more than 100 million dollars, and therefore would cover the whole bill.

Russia charged in a note handed to Italian Ambassador Manlio Brosio in Moscow that the Italians have placed inflated valuations on the Balkan properties and are stalling.

As an example, the note said, the Italians have insisted on valuing at $3,059,807 three Italian-owned insurance companies in Hungary "whose liabilities exceed their assets by $40,606."

The Foreign Ministry said Italy is ready to seek an agreement on the value of the properties according to the provisions of a special Soviet-Italian pact of December, 1948.

A spokesman said Italy will reply formally after receiving the text of the Russian note.

Mexico's Secretary Of Defense to Visit U. S.

Mexico's defense secretary, Lieut. Gen. Gilberto R. Limon, will arrive in San Antonio, Tex., Saturday to start his first official visit to this country.

Gen. Limon will reach Washington next Wednesday for a round of official visits. He will review the cadets at West Point April 21, visit New York City the following day and on April 26 will witness a demonstration at the Army infantry school at Fort Benning, Ga.

In Washington General Limon will meet the joint chiefs of staff and talk to U. S. defense officials.

U. S. to Urge Return of 20,000 Children to Greek Homeland

Secretary of State Acheson said yesterday the United States is concerned over the delay of eastern European Communist countries in returning thousands of Greek children to their homeland.

The United States Government will continue to insist, he said, that the reunion of the children with their families is a humanitarian matter "which must not be obscured or delayed by political issues or technicalities."

Acheson's views were given in correspondence with the apostolic delegate, the Most Rev. Amleto Cicognani. The State Department made them public.

Officials estimate that some 20,000 children, taken from Greece during the fighting with the Communists, are still held in eastern European countries.

Acheson noted that the United Nations General Assembly has twice called for the return of the children. The House adopted a resolution last month expressing its interest in the issue.

Archbishop Cicognani said that it is the hope of Pope Pius that the problem "will continue to be treated as one of importance and actuality by interested governments." He said the Vatican felt "profound appreciation" for the efforts of the United States.

New Celebes Fight Reported

Jakarta, U. S. I., April 12 (AP).—A new clash was reported near the Celebes island port of Makassar today, less than 24 hours after Indonesian officials announced the end of a week-old revolt there.

The government admitted Defense Minister Sulan Hamengku Buwono's report yesterday of the surrender of rebel Capt. Andi Abdul Aziz was premature.

The new hour-long clash was reported by the Indonesian news agency Antara, which said one rebel partisan was killed. The dispatch said the fighting involved rebels and sympathizers of the federal government, but the latter group was no further identified.

Information Ministry officials said yesterday a battalion of federal troops had landed after standing offshore on two Dutch ships for a week. But this was denied today by Sultan Buwono.

The situation in Makassar appeared to be as follows:

Aziz's troops, mostly Indonesians who formerly were in the Dutch army, continued to patrol the streets. Aziz apparently released a few dozen federal troops taken prisoner, but refused to return their confiscated arms, until the waiting troop ships return to Java. The government has promised to send a plane for Aziz Thursday, but he still has not said wheher he will come to Jakarta.

50 Huk Leaders Slain

Manila, P. I., April 12 (U.P.)—Field reports today said government troops killed 50 leaders of the Communist-led Hukabalahap guerillas in a surprise air and ground attack on a rebel hideout 60 miles north of Manila.

Brazilian Police Put in Own Jail

Rio De Janeiro, April 12 (AP).—Troops rushed to the town of Uberlandia recently to set to rights a topsy-turvy situation which had wound up with the police locked up in their own jail by Communists.

According to police of Belohorizonte, this is how it happened:

Sixty-eight Communists at gunpoint seized the British-owned Pirapetinga plantation near Uberlandia, some 425 miles from Rio De Janeiro. The manager, Charles F. Young, succeeded in getting word to police in the nearby town of Canapolis, who relayed the alert to troops at Belohorizonte.

The troops ronded up the Communists, who already had laid out the plantation in 29 parcels for redistribution to the peasants. They hauled the Communists off to jail in Uberlandia.

Communist sympathizers from Canapolis then laid siege to the jail. The besieging group of about 30 men and 9 women routed police, freed the Communists and helped them jail police.

The troops came back again, rearrested the Communists and freed the police.

Hope Given Up For Shanghai Rescue by Sea

By Marshall Andrews
Post Reporter.

The United States, balked by both Communist and Nationalist factions in China, yesterday gave up hope of removing 300 Americans and 1700 other nationals from Shanghai by sea.

Secretary of State Acheson told his news conference that all plans for evacuation had to be abandoned when the Communist government failed to grant clearance before the Nationalist deadline for mining the exit. Plans for the evacuation were begun in January when the United States closed all official activities in China and announced withdrawal of its personnel.

At the same time, it was reported from Hongkong that Chinese Communists had taken over the British barracks in Peking Tuesday. American, French and Dutch barracks were "requisitioned" by the Communists in mid-January. Although Great Britain has recognized the Communist government, it was believed no troops were maintained in the barracks, which adjoin the consular compound.

Rail, Air Travel Banned

Acheson said yesterday the use of railway, aircraft and small coastal vessels to remove United States and other foreign personnel from Shanghai had been investigated and the choice had been narrowed to use of ships when the Communists refused to permit travel by rail or air. However, owners of vessels declined to risk them in the narrow north channel of the Yangtze, the only channel clear of mines.

It was finally decided, Acheson said, to bring two LSTs down from Japan to ferry the evacuees to the American President Liner General Gordon. This was done, Acheson said, "with oral assurances that the Shanghai authorities approved in principle the use of shallow draft vessels to ferry passengers to larger ships off the Yangtze estuary." Finally, he said, after the State Department had spent nearly a half-million dollars in this effort, the Communists refused permission to use the LSTs.

After numerous other attempts to procure vessels which could handle the traffic and at the same time meet with approval of the Communist authorities, plans were made to use the British vessel An King. This vessel was so small, Acheson said, that two ferry trips would have to be made to remove the 300 Americans and 450 British alone. In addition, five days would be needed to arrange customs clearance and to load after permission had been granted by the Communists.

Time Insufficient

Even had permission been granted at once, Acheson explained, the time needed to carry out the mechanical details of the operation would have extended it one full week beyond the deadline set by the Nationalists for mining the channel.

"It is now too late to carry out this plan," said Acheson, "since any attempt to run through the minefields would entail serious risks."

Acheson emphasized that every effort would be continued to get Americans out of Shanghai. Although he labelled "premature" any statement of what might be done, he said efforts would be renewed to secure permission to travel by rail either to a North China port or to Hongkong.

All official personnel from Peiping and Tientsin would be started out of China by the end of this week, Acheson said. Consul General O. Edmund Clubb was to leave Peiping today, he said, to join Consul Alfred T. Wellborn at Tientsin, from which place both would sail Friday.

Italian Reds Stage Weak Arms Protests

Naples, April 12 (AP).—Italian police tonight dispersed 500 Communist-led demonstrators who gathered near the United States Consulate in Turin, shouting: "We don't want American arms—viva peace—we want bread."

Four women demonstrators were arrested.

The incident was about the best the Communists could do presently in protesting the landing of Atlantic Pact arms.

The main effort was a call for an 8-hour strike by the Communist-led Naples Chamber of Labor. This failed completely.

The first arms shipment to Italy under the North Atlantic treaty arrived from the United States last night on the freighter Exilona. By this morning, the weapons were safely stored in secret arsenals.

The Communists had promised in advance that Italy would repel the arms and that workers would refuse to unload or transport them. Non-Communist labor organizations said not a single dock worker refused to transfer the guns to waiting flatcars.

B-29 Crash Kills 13 At Top-Secret Base

Albuquerque, N. M., April 12 (AP). A B-29 Superfortress plowed straight into a mountain instead of turning and killed 13 airmen near here last night.

The ship cracked up in a highly secret area of Sandia Base, which is engaged in atomic and other special weapons work. Result: A tight security cloak on most details of the tragedy.

All aboard the four-engined bomber died in the fiery explosion which followed almost instantly. The bodies were burned beyond recognition.

[The crash sent up a "mushroom-shaped" cloud, which the Air Force said was caused by explosion of a 6000-gallon load of high octane gasoline and not by any fissionable material, United Press reported.]

Plane and men were from the Strategic Air Command's 509th Bomb Wing, Walker Base, Roswell, N. Mex. They had landed at Kirtland Base here and refuelled on what was officially labeled a navigation training flight.

The Superfort took off eastward toward the Manzano Mountains from a runway more than 10,000 feet long. Authorities were unable to explain why it did not execute a 90-degree bank to avoid the rocky crest, as is prescribed for all craft operating from the field.

Instead, the craft roared straight ahead, climbing little more than 1000 feet off the ground. Wreckage indicated it first struck about 500 feet from the top, then bounced another 200 higher.

Kirtland's air control tower reported there was no message from the bomber to indicate anything amiss.

Walker Base announced these men were aboard the bomber: Capts. John R. Martin, plane commander, West Frankfort, Ill., and David H. Foust, Detroit, Mich.; First Lieuts., Richard A. Coates, Cleona, Pa.; Ralph E. Farmer, formerly of Centralia, Ill.; Lewis Ranck, Altoona, Pa.; Thomas J. Stultz, Russell, Ky.; S/Sergts. Richard E. Cooper, Denver, Colo.; Eugene R. Thompson, Kansas City, Kans.; Walter C. Boedeker, Danville, Ill.; James B. Karney, New Franklin, Mo., and Gerald M. Powell, Le Raysville, Pa.; Sergts. J. R. Chilton, jr., RFD 2, Hermon, N. Y., and Virgil R. Tennyson, Whon, Tex.

Witness heard the crash and explosion and saw the flames from a distance. Ground crewmen clambered over and around huge boulders to reach the scattered wreckage. The ship hit about 5 miles southeast of headquarters in the 26,880-acre Sandia Reservation.

B-25 Lands On Belly at Bolling Base

Its landing gear stuck, a Bolling Air Force Base B-25 was forced to come in on its belly at 2:22 p. m. yesterday. Observers called the emergency maneuver "a beauty." No one was injured.

According to Bolling officials, the pilot, First Lieut. L. R. Galloway, 1064 Barnaby ter. se., found the light bomber's landing gear stuck at 1 p. m. after a proficiency flight of about three hours.

Galloway circled for more than an hour to use up his gas and cut down the danger of explosion before landing. Also in the crew were Capt. A. W. Gullion, copilot, and T/Sergt. R. A. Ostazewski, crew chief.

Squalls Halt Baltic Sea Search For Missing U. S. Navy Plane

the American searchers might have been misled by a buoy marking the deep sea burial ground of mustard gas the Russians dumped last year.

An Associated Press correspondent, Birgit Mangor, flew for an hour over the area, but saw nothing but water and other search craft.

The discovery of the fish box raised the question whether all the other objects sighted might have come from fishing boats. Optimism lowered at United States Air Force headquarters in Weisbaden.

Swedish and Danish craft are assisting in the hunt.

Moscow newspapers published a series of dispatches from abroad declaring the search was being used as an excuse to conduct aerial maneuvers off Soviet territory.

Sweden protested mildly to the United States Embassy in Stockholm against flights by search planes over Sweden. With a tradition of 100 years of neutrality, Sweden is trying to stay on the sidelines in the east-west cold war.

In some cases, the Foreign Office said, "planes have passed over the forbidden area around Karlskrona." The naval base is out of bounds for all foreign planes and for Swedish civilian aircraft.

Denmark is a partner of the United States in the North Atlantic defense pact. Sweden has chosen to remain out of the pact.

A Soviet news agency dispatch to Moscow from Stockholm declared the United States violated Denmark's sovereignty by sending aircraft to a Danish airport without warning and that "significant military air forces" have concentrated in the region of the Baltic Sea.

The United States search planes, however, are limited to unarmed cargo ships, Navy patrol craft and B-17 bombers converted for search use.

American officials said the Navy Privateer was the only United States plane in the Baltic area Saturday.

Bridges Would Arm U. S. Planes 'to the Teeth'

Senator Bridges (R., N. H.) proposed yesterday that American planes patrolling near Russia's borders be "armed to the teeth" and ordered to shoot back if fired upon.

Bridges asserted the Soviet Air Force had "ambushed and shot down in cold blood" a relatively slow and unarmed American patrol plane which drifted into Russian-occupied Latvia last week.

"I say continue our patrol flights," Bridges said. "I say use planes and arm them to the teeth.

Probe to Precede U. S. Answer to Russia

The United States will not answer Russia's protest that an American bomber fired on Soviet fighter until it makes a thorough investigation of the Communist-reported incident, Secretary of State Acheson said yesterday.

Excess Speed Hurts Rocket Industry

America's fast-growing rocket industry may be hurting itself with its own speed, mechanical engineers were told here yesterday.

New rocket engines, one of their manufacturers said are being built these days even before the "bugs" are found in their parent models.

The industry's problem was presented by Harry B. Horne, jr., assistant executive vice president of Reaction Motors, Inc., Rockaway, N. J.

He spoke at a special session of the American Rocket Society, meeting here concurrently with the American Society of Mechanical Engineers, which opened its three-day spring meeting at the Statler Hotel.

In another meeting, the engineers were told of British efforts to develop gas-turbine engines to replace steam engines in warships and merchant vessels.

Dr. T. W. F. Brown, of Wallsend, England, said the main object was to produce turbines which could use a cheaper form of fuel oil and operate at much higher temperatures.

Horne, who disclosed the growing pains in the rocket industry, blamed the terrific pressure in the international rocket race to develop the best liquid-fueled rocket engines for piloted aircraft and guided missiles.

"It is frequently necessary for contractors to begin the development of a new and more complex engine before its predecessor type has had a chance for field operation at all," Horne declared.

Though it is expensive to test such engines as they are being developed, it is also expensive to rush into new designs before the primary ones have been fully evaluated, he pointed out. The industry, unable to bear the testing expense, is forced to take its present course.

Horne suggested that only the Government, with its military stake in the future of rocket-powered aircraft and guided missiles, can underwrite the costs of "rocket engine development along sound lines."

One "sound" course suggested by Horne is for the Government to order as many as 100 engines at a time (instead of an average of 10), even though the extra 90 are unneeded.

Such costs, he declared, would be justified in furthering an industry due to become a vital defense factor overnight should a national emergency arise.

Britain's progress in gas turbines for maritime use was outlined sparingly by Dr. Brown, member of a four-man industrial committee set up by the country's ministry of supply to direct such development. American engineers have been working toward the same goal.

Later yesterday two Navy engineers unofficially reported that gas-turbine power plants for ships, such as originally advanced by S. A. Kane, formerly of the Bureau of Ships, appeared feasible.

Such lighweight, compact engines of the type now used in aircraft, they said, might save up to 28 percent of the weight of a ship's propulsion equipment. This would mean extra weight and space to increase gunpower and cruising range, agreed Commanders R. T. Simpson, of Norfolk, Va., and W. T. Sawyer, of the Bureau of Ships.

Gas turbines are engines in which a propeller shaft is whirled by the action of gas and compressed air impinging on fan-like blades attached to a rotor mechanism.

HEIDI Says: MEET MY PROFESSORS

Between the five of them, they've almost one hundred years of specialized baking experience! Every day, at the HEIDI counters in every one of GIANT'S 20 stores, you'll find delicious examples of their skills and ingenuity. Give the family a treat tonight! Visit your neighborhood GIANT, and select any of the many HEIDI delicacies displayed there. They're all as fresh as tomorrow's sunrise and as tasty as the choicest bakery gems.

Heidi "Letters" Mean More

Heidi's "letters"—M.E., F.I. and B.S.—in the baking industry are as meaningful as the letters and title designations of other fields and professions. They stand for Modern Equipment, Finest Ingredients, and Baking Skill—essential factors in producing bakery creations that will delight every member of your family.

Baked Today—Sold Today

The freshness of Heidi products is another factor that has helped to build their great popularty. You can be sure that they will come to your table at the peak of their freshness and fine flavor. The Heidi organization maintains a daily delivery service to every one of GIANT'S 20 stores to assure just that!

WILLIAM P. BARRY

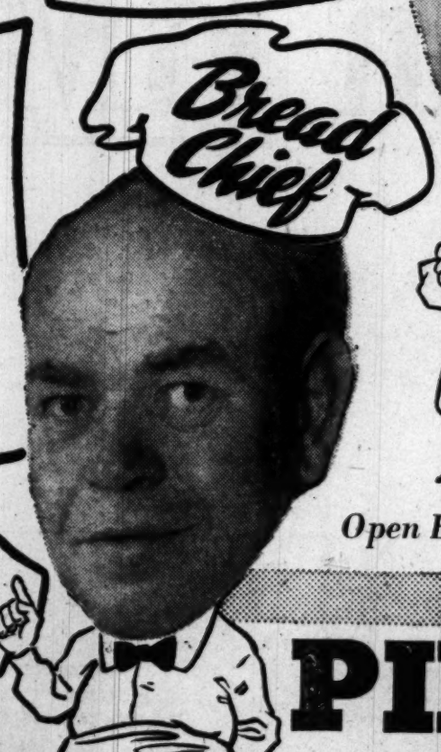
Plant superintendent — one of Heidi's original staff. A specialist in the baking of pies, cakes, cookies and pastries. Has more than fourteen years' experience in large and small bakeries, and has also had special training courses conducted by America's finest shortening, flour and yeast companies.

EDWARD A. WEEDON

Technically, he's the Heidi specialist in all kinds of "yeast goods," which means he has had 24 years' experience in the mixing and production departments. His knowledge and ingenuity are responsible for many of the tasty Heidi creations that are daily gaining in popularity.

STANLEY KIDWELL

The bread chief—a specialist in mixing fine dough for breads, rolls, and buns. Also, during his 25 years of bakery experience, he's been very successful in baking cakes, pies and cookies. In addition, he's had special training by nationally famous manufacturers of various bakery essentials.



CLARENCE DAWSON

Another "charter" member of the Heidi organization. He has more than a quarter of a century's experience with leading bakeries. The cake chief, his specialty is mixing tasty doughs for the many Heidi creations. He also has had special training by several of the leading manufacturers of bakery ingredients.

JOHN L. DORSCH

The oven chief—a baker with 22 years' experience in oven work, during which time he has produced millions of pounds of bakery goods. He's a specialist in every phase of what the baking industry refers to as "yeast rise goods." He, too, is one of the original Heidi staff, and he has played an important part in producing many of our choice items.

"Maurice"

Decorating Artist

—and, like so many true artists, Maurice insists upon being cloaked in anonymity. His ingenuity in designing superb decorations for cakes, and his skill in executing them is your assurance that Heidi cakes you order for celebrating special occasions will be the crowning touch that will assure their success.

Area Retail Trade Jumps 207 Percent

the suburban growth has been more spectacular but the dollar volume is of less importance.

For retail trade, these are the percentage increases registered by the various sections in the 1939-48 period:

Fairfax County, 474 percent; Arlington County, 469 percent; Alexandria, 399 percent; Montgomery County, 325 percent; Prince Georges County, 292 percent; District of Columbia, 175 percent.

These sections make up what now is officially known as Metropolitan Washington, the eighth or ninth largest metropolitan area in the Nation. The estimated national increase is 200 percent.

Other than wholesale, retail and the selected service classifications, the business census covered hotels, amusements, tourist courts and such miscellaneous establishments. Outside the District they do not count for an appreciable volume of business or number of employes.

Hotel Business Doubled

In Washington in 1948, however, 98 hotels did $39,996,000 worth of business and employed 7683 persons compared to $17,400,000 in receipts in 1939. In the amusement field, 201 establishments did $20,182,000 in business and had 3241 workers but no comparative figures are available.

Here, for the District and the suburban sections, are the dollar-volume figures on the three major business classifications:

Metropolitan Washington:

Retail — $1480.8 million in 1948 and $482.5 million in 1939; wholesale — $1283.8 million in 1948 and $392.7 million in 1939; service — $108.2 million in 1948 and $40.2 million in 1939.

District:

Retail—$1107.7 million dollars in 1948 and $402.8 million in 1939; wholesale—$1195.1 million in 1948 and $347.8 million in 1939; service—$88.0 million in 1948 and $36.5 million in 1939.

All suburbs:

Retail—$373.1 million in 1948 and $79.7 million in 1939; wholesale—$88.7 million in 1948 and $44.9 million in 1939; service—$20.2 million in 1948 and $3.7 million in 1939.

Arlington:

Retail—$93.3 million in 1948 and $16.4 million in 1939; wholesale—$26.3 million in 1948 and $11.6 million in 1939; service—$5.2 million in 1948 and $0.9 million in 1939.

Alexandria:

Retail—$70.9 million in 1948 and $14.2 million in 1939; wholesale—$30.0 million in 1948 and $21.6 million in 1939; service—$3.2 million in 1948 and $0.7 million in 1939.

Fairfax:

Retail—$27.0 million in 1948 and $4.7 in 1939; wholesale—$2.3 million in 1948 and $0.8 million in 1939; service—$1.2 million in 1948 and $0.1 million in 1939.

Prince Georges:

Retail—$78.7 million in 1948 and $20.1 million in 1939; wholesale—$15.0 million in 1948 and $2.0 million in 1939; service—$5.2 million in 1948 and $1.0 million in 1939.

$103 Million in Montgomery

Montgomery:

Retail, 103.2 million dollars in 1948 and 24.3 million dollars in 1939; wholesale, 15.1 million dollars in 1948 and 8.9 million dollars in 1939; service, 5.4 million dollars in 1949 and 1.0 million dollars in 1939.

Following are the employment figures for the District:

Retail, 69,368 in 1948 and 50,838 in 1939; wholesale, 16,782 in 1948 and 10,552 in 1939; service, 16,119 in 1948 and 13,175 in 1939; total, 102,269 in 1948 and 74,567 in 1939.

Arlington: total of 6113 in 1948 and 2542 in 1938; Alexandria: 4558 and 1948 and 2090 in 1939; Fairfax: 1354 in 1948 and 524 in 1939; Prince Georges: 4785 in 1948 and 2267 in 1939; Montgomery: 6405 in 1948 and 2996 in 1938.

Employment figures were taken for the work week nearest November 15, 1948.

Wide Business Gain Reported, With Slow Unemployment Rise

of $30,500,000,000. This was a billion-dollar improvement over any quarter of last year.

Figures on personal income for March were not available, but in February were shown to have reached an all-time record rate of $219,100,000,000 largely because of the veterans' refund.

The council estimated that national income—which represents dollars earned in production and therefore is not distorted by the GI payments—rose by $1,200,000,000 on the strength of higher wage earnings and profits. It stood at an annual rate of $220,300,000,000 in the first quarter.

Average Income $1323

The average personal income, after taxes, was estimated at an annual rate of $1323 for every man, woman and child. This exceeded the average for boomtime 1948 by $21. Because of the slight price decline, it represents $58 more buying power.

Only two of the major economic indexes pointed down, but they were important ones—farm income, and industry's investment in new plant and equipment.

Farmers' income was running in February about 10 percent behind a year ago. In terms of the prices he must pay, the farmer had 4 percent less real income than he had in 1948.

The outlay for industrial expansion is expected to run behind 1949 by 8 percent in the first half and 11 percent over the full year.

Even in this an optimist might find a sign of improved business confidence. Industry earlier had reported an expected drop of 14 to 15 percent.

1½ Billion Construction

Construction was estimated in March to be worth $1,500,000,000, well above last year's level.

An estimated 80,000 dwellings were started in January, another 80,000 in February. Preliminary reports indicate that the record pace continued into March, the council said.

Industrial production in March rose to 184 on the Federal Reserve Board's index, indicating a rapid recovery from the coal strike, which ended March 12.

The fall business recovery had carried the index up to 183 in January. Then, when the soft coal walkout crippled the railroad, steel and other industries, it fell to 180 in February.

Joblessness is expected to decline further in April and May as farm hiring picks up. But even after the March dip, which reduced the total to 4,123,000, unemployment still stood higher than in any month of 1949.

Joblessness was estimated at 6.5 percent of the labor force in March, as against 5.3 percent in 1949 and 3.3 percent in 1948. The average in 1939 was 17.1.

Unknown Hero To Be Chosen in a container and pulled out at random.

Then officers will carry sealed instructions to the overseas cemeteries. The remains of the principal will be exhumed and local records carefully examined to be sure there is no possibility of later identification.

The six bodies chosen to represent their theater will be placed in steel caskets and sent home. Each original casket will be destroyed and the records marked "secret" and eventually destroyed.

All six bodies from each theater will be brought to the Philadelphia naval shipyard and transferred to new caskets. This is to help keep secret the theater from which the final choice derives.

Representatives from all the armed services will escort the six bodies to Independence Hall and stand continuous guard over them until the selection is made.

No decision has been made as to how this is to be done. In 1921, an outstanding hero, Sergt. Edward F. Younger, made the choice, passing around the caskets and finally placing a bouquet of flowers on his selection.

The unknown finally chosen will be taken to the Naval Gun Factory here by a naval vessel, yet to be selected, arriving by noon, May 27, 1951. Undoubtedly some famous warship of the past war will be picked. Then the body will lie in state in the rotunda of the Capitol.

Final ceremonies attending the burial at Arlington National Cemetery will take place on Memorial Day, Wednesday, May 30.

POLIO VICTIM—Mrs. Frank M. Chapin of Manila, P. I., smiles encouragement at son, Frank, 7, at the end of their flight by Army transport plane at Bolling Air Base yesterday. Frank, who is better known as "Scotty," is a polio patient and was flown here by the Army for treatment at Children's Hospital

Polio Victim, 7, Lands Smiling

Dorothy G. Scheffler of Philadelphia, Pa., accompanied them.

When the plane set down at Bolling at 5:30 p. m. yesterday, the D. C. Chapter of the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis had an ambulance and a portable respirator waiting. The respirator was not needed.

Mrs. Channing Walker, chairman of the Women's Committee at the local chapter, and Mrs. Hazel Wyatt, physiotherapist of the chapter, also were on hand.

Mrs. Chapin will stay with her mother-in-law, Mrs. Robert M. Chapin, 2039 Park rd. nw. Her other children, left in Manila, are Donald, 3½, and Carol, 10 months.

Suspect Denies Office Holdup

Andrew Carlos Ware, 28-year-old suspect in Tuesday's daylight robbery of a life insurance company, was charged yesterday in four other robbery cases and one attempted holdup.

In each of the five new cases, holdup victims identified Ware as their assailant, or as one of their assailants.

Ware's day also included an arraignment before United States Commissioner Cyril S. Lawrence in which he was held for grand jury action in the insurance holdup. He was placed under a total of $20,000 bond on charges of assault with intent to kill, and robbery.

Admits Being in Vicinity

On the stand yesterday Ware denied any part in the holdup of the second-floor offices of the North Carolina Mutual Life Insurance Co., 2002 11th st. nw.

Two handkerchief-masked bandits forced two women clerks to lie on the office floor while they scooped up a total of $2393 in cash, checks and money orders.

During the ensuing 10-minute chase, the bandits dropped all but $25 of their loot and a man identified as Ware exchanged shots with a policeman.

Ware idmitted he was in an alley in the vicinity of the holdup. The shot-at policeman, Pvt. Thomas F. Walker, identified Ware, however.

Denies Part in Other Cases

Ware also denied any connection with the five other cases. These were:

The $1200 holdup of Arthur Salus, March 25 in his drugstore, the Woodland Pharmacy, 132 U st. nw. Four men participated, police said.

The $18 holdup of Reid's Market, 1556 3rd st. nw., on March 9. Two men participated.

The $304 holdup and beating of Samuel Einwohner, 54, near his home at 441 Decatur st. nw., on March 15. Einwohner was getting out of his car when three masked men approached him.

The shooting and attempted holdup of Morris Forman, 48, of 6508 13th st. nw. He was shot in the shoulder by a lone gunman as he prepared to get into his car near his store, 500 Irving st. nw., on March 14.

The $8 holdup and beating of Willard Braswell, 49, of 2914 13th st. nw., early last Saturday. Braswell, a cab driver, said two men attacked him in the 2200 block of 15th st. nw.

D. C. Phone Strike 'Inevitable'

A strike of 2700 operators against the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. "appears to be inevitable" for April 26, leader of the union hello-girls declared yesterday.

Mrs. Eleanor J. Palmer, president of Division 50, CIO Communications Workers of America, made the strike announcement after C&P rejected the union's proposal for a 15-cent-an-hour "package" increase in benefits, and an alternative proposal to arbitrate the dispute.

April 26 is the deadline set for a Nation-wide strike by CWA against the Bell Telephone system—of which C&P is a part—after an earlier strike call had been postponed for 60 days by the union at the request of President Truman.

C. H. Johnson, vice president and general manager of the local telephone company, said yesterday that the union "has not made a case" in support of its demands. He insisted that wages paid C&P operating employes compare favorably with those in other industries for work requiring comparable knowledge.

Mrs. Palmer said that a strike vote will be taken among the operators in order to conform with the Taft-Hartley Act's strike procedure.

Full Budget Urged In Prince Georges

Speakers urged provision of the full amounts asked for schools, health, recreation and library items in the Prince Georges County budget at a hearing held yesterday in the courthouse at Upper Marlboro, Md.

Only one speaker opposed increases in taxes. He was Charles W. Harvey of Bowie, who said he represented only himself, a taxpayers and didn't want his taxes increased.

League of Women Voters members were prepared to attack failure of the estimates to carry detailed income figures, but this was met by copies of the income provided in mimeographed form by the County Commissioners.

Jerrold V. Powers, attorney to the board, read the various items and explained them. They total $1,078,518.12.

The commissioners said they will study the statements of the citizens and expect to have the annual levy ready to sign next Tuesday. Items of the budget will be pared if possible in an effort to hold the tax rate to somewhere in the neighborhood of the present $1.97 per $100.

Mrs. Margaret Ashelman of Greenbelt, read a letter from Mrs. Reuben Bogdanoff, president of the League of Women Voters, which commended the commissioners for the improvement in the statement as compared with last year's budget statement.

The league indorsed the full county school budget, the full health budget, the full recreation program and the increase of one-half cent in the library tax asked to provide better service and more books.

Wesley C. Darling, president of the county Council of Parent-Teacher Associations, urged the commissioners to grant the full $2,531,522 asked by the school board.

Mrs. Georgia K. Benjamin, College Park, in urging the full school program, cited a recent series of Washington Post articles in pointing out that overcrowded schools affect the mental attitude of children resulting in behavior problems which require services of a specialist.

Louis Kutsch, county assessor, told the citizens that it is not true that apartments do not pay as high a tax as private homes. He points out that a $100-a-month apartment unit would be assessed at $5400 for tax purposes which compares favorably with the average home.

Denial Urged for Bethesda Zoning Application

The Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission yesterday recommended denial of a petition for apartment zoning of a 42.5 acre tract at Wisconsin ave. and Cedar lane, Bethesda.

The land, for which rezoning application was filed by Irene W. Parker and the Congress Construction Co., adjoins the White Fathers of Africa tract which was also deemed unsuitable for apartment use by the commission earlier this week.

A hearing on the application by the Montgomery County Council is set for 9 a. m. Saturday at the Bethesda County Bldg.

The commission also recommended denial of three petitions for commercial listings and favored an industrial application.

Commercial zoning was sought by Harry G. Cole for 4 acres on Kensington-Wheaton rd., Kensington Heights; by Maynard P. Shoemaker and G. Leonard Daymude for 7371 square feet at 60 Lincoln ave., Kensington, and Mary J. Krouse for several lots in Lincoln and Perry aves., Kensington.

The industrial application was filed by Walter E. Perry for part of a lot at 4910 Elm st., Bethesda.

Vandenberg's Illness

We are unfeignedly happy to hear that the latest operation on Senator Vandenberg has been successful. It is a severe trial that the Senator is undergoing—a trial augmented by the concurrent illness of his wife and helpmeet. Millions of Americans will pray that he will pull through, and quickly; so that that resonant voice and commanding presence of his shall again be familiar in our august chamber.

The absence of Senator Vandenberg has left a big hole in the leadership of the Republican Party, as well as in our public life; and there is a scramble for bits of his toga on the part of men who have neither his intellectual stature nor his sense of public service. He is that rare person—a good party man who recognizes the borderline between partisanship and patriotism. Granted that the frontier is shadowy; yet honorable men can sense it, and act accordingly. It must distress the Senator that so little thought is given to this line of demarcation. To him St. Paul's indictment of "wickedness in high places" must recur as he observes the degradation in our politics.

May Senator Vandenberg be given enough strength to bear his present cross and to restore him to health and public activity.

Kohlberg's Klan

Identification of Alfred Kohlberg as Senator McCarthy's Edgar Bergen has been confirmed by the damning parallelism in word and idea between McCarthy's material and Kohlberg's propaganda. For instance, Senator McCarthy last week read in part from a secret Lattimore letter as Kohlberg had himself quoted it back in 1948. The quotation was intended to show that Lattimore wanted Chinese Communist appointments in OWI; actually the purport of the letter was just the opposite. Kohlberg thus stands revealed as the evil genius back of the mud-slinging. Kohlberg is, indeed, the so-called China, or Chiang Kai-shek, lobby, and as such is perhaps the moving spirit in a cabal of no mean proportions. Kohlberg's campaign has hitherto paralyzed the State Department into a state of pusillanimity which has simply put a premium on the boldness of the ubiquitous Kohlberg.

Together with the supineness of the State Department, this Kohlberg has had other advantages. The rabid ex- and anti-Communists, who have sold so many of our policy-makers that they are God's elect in the conduct of the Cold War, have rallied to his standard, and doubtless have given him a point or two in his scurrilous operations. He is a Pied Piper who has gathered to his cause a lot of disgruntled ex-officeholders and Republican diehards. On top of that, this man Kohlberg seems to have attracted men in sensitive agencies of Government. They are, together, a rabbit warren of conspirators and "knife him" artists in and out of Government against the good name and standing of reputable men. The sad fact is that the lobby has taken in so many innocents of half a dozen varieties—persons ever ripe to be sold a bill of goods that somebody is selling somebody down the river, persons who would bleed the entire American Treasury for China, pros and antis of all descriptions who want the solace of a cause external to themselves.

Who is this Kohlberg—the man that Owen Lattimore spotted behind the arras, and had the courage to strike at? Kohlberg used to do a $1,500,000 a year import business in textiles coming out of the Chinese port of Swatow. He has set up associations having as their object the support of Chiang Kai-shek. Out of these mills have poured bales of abuse of those who are not on their side of the China argument. A monthly magazine of plain venom has as its board chairman this same Kohlberg. The China lobby in Washington has many ramifications, but when The Washington Post and the St. Louis Post-Dispatch looked into it, all roads led back to the man from Swatow. Another hobby of Kohlberg's seems to be to finance the personal election campaigns of sundry Republicans. At any rate, the facts about one of them, viz, Senator Bridges, have been unearthed. Now that some of the mud has been taken out of the atmosphere, this China lobby ought to be investigated, as Representative Mansfield has often demanded—to find out how many of the workers in it have dodged registration, either under the Registration of Lobbying Act or the Foreign Registration Act; to find out, also, the extent to which the Chinese Nationalists have been using American aid money to lobby for more American money. As Miss Doris Fleeson has written, a word from the President would set an inquiry in motion. Incidentally, the inquiry would reveal where Kohlberg got the letter which he and McCarthy so deliberately distorted—a letter, admittedly, classified secret by a Government agency.

Reason For Veto

Among the arguments used to clinch passage of the Kerr bill exempting most natural gas producers from regulation was the fact that the Defense Department had come out in favor of the measure. But the letter from Maj. Gen. Patrick W. Timberlake cited by Senator Edwin Johnson and Speaker Rayburn contains such a naive interpretation of the purpose and probable effect of the Kerr bill that the President would be justified in discounting it altogether.

General Timberlake, who is director of the Munitions Board staff, stated in his letter of May 16, 1949, that "the purpose of S. 1498 is to enact into law the limitations upon the Federal control of the exploration, drilling, production and gathering of natural gas which are now stated in Federal Power Commission Order 139." That statement betrays a gross misunderstanding of the facts. No control over exploration, drilling and the like is now possible under the Natural Gas Act, nor is it contemplated. What the Kerr bill would do is remove the so-called independent natural gas producers—largely big oil companies—from FPC regulation as to price in the sale of their commodity to pipeline companies.

Secondly, the Timberlake letter asserts that the effect of the Kerr bill "should be to encourage the development of oil and gas resources and thus would be of benefit to the national security." There is little reason to believe that the exploration of gas resources would be increased by the Kerr bill. Natural gas is largely the byproduct of the exploration for oil—and oil prices are unregulated. Indeed, until the recent increase in use, natural gas was an unwanted stepchild; the Kerr bill is an effort to capitalize on expanded demand. It is significant that the reasonable rate of return which the FPC has set for nonindependent producers affiliated with pipeline companies has not deterred investment and expansion.

It should be obvious from these contradictions that the Kerr bill has sailed under false colors. There is yet another misleading statement by proponents that natural gas prices would not rise because they are covered by long-term contracts. The fact is that these contracts contain escape clauses, and if producers were free to charge what the traffic would bear, the remaining steps in public utility regulation of the transmission and sale of gas would be largely ineffectual. We urge the President to halt this parade of misrepresentations with a resounding veto.

Two Premiers

The country will echo Secretary Acheson's congratulations to Premiers Nehru and Liaquat Ali Khan on the successful conclusion of the New Dehli talks on treatment of minorities. If the art of statesmanship is to lead, both men have shown themselves possessed of it. That is to say, they are ahead of their fellows, though perhaps not of the wordless mass of the population, which wants only peace and the chance to earn a bare living.

Recent incitements to riot and bloodletting have come from the intelligentsia, and these have varying motivations. There is in Pakistan many a Muslim fanatic who would be in favor of ridding the new country of the 12 million Hindus in Pakistan. In India the extreme wing of Nehru's own party refuses to recognize partition, and the members of it are not averse to making life miserable for the 42 million Muslims in India's territory.

The agreement on minorities is only a vagrant augury that the whole range of Indo-Pakistan disputes will be settled peaceably. The good omen could be dashed tomorrow by any hesitation at the top. It is to be hoped that both Premiers will keep the spotlight on the present accord and throw the resources of government into its implementation. In that event a momentum may be generated which will sweep away the entire controversy between two countries which are now spending between two thirds and three quarters of their respective budgets on arms.

Crime Probe

It is now apparent that the Senate made a serious mistake in assigning the Administration's two crime bills to the Interstate Commerce Committee. To be sure, they involve control of the instrumentalities of interstate commerce for the suppression of crime. But general legislation dealing with crime usually goes to the Judiciary Committee, and the present situation is clearly one demanding a thorough investigation into criminal activity of Nation-wide concern. In other words, the conflict of jurisdiction between the committees ought to have been resolved, in our opinion, in favor of the Judiciary Committee, which proposes to do a thorough and comprehensive job.

The compromise offered by Majority Leader Lucas and accepted on Tuesday by the Democratic Policy Committee is unfortunate for a number of reasons. It would set up a special committee with members drawn from both Judiciary and Interstate Commerce. The effect would be a division of responsibility, loss of discipline over the committee, and creation of a new precedent for special investigatory units contrary to the sound policy followed in recent years of keeping investigations within the standing committees. The ease with which this reform appears to have been abandoned by the senatorial leadership is certain to be disillusioning to those who are seeking further improvement of congressional machinery.

Vice President Barkley has been given a free hand in selection of the proposed five-man special committee. Presumably this means that the committee will be headed by Senator Kefauver, who has sponsored an investigation of the comprehensive type. That is all to the good. Senator Kefauver is as able as he is fearless and, in addition, the country has reason to be confident of his sincerity in seeking a thorough investigation. But it is also assumed that this turn of events will keep Senator Ferguson off the committee, and this seems to us a grave mistake. We have often disagreed with Senator Ferguson, but we recognize that he is one of the most persistent, thorough and relentless investigators in the Senate. His special training in this field entitles him to a place on the committee; and if he should be excluded, the committee would begin its work under a suspicion that the Senate is afraid to expose a complete picture of interstate criminal operations.

If this task is worth doing, it is worth doing well. Even a suspicion of whitewash in drawing up the resolution or in selecting the personnel would be a serious disservice to the cause of exposing and suppressing criminal gangs.

Baltic Incident

The incident of the American plane shot down by the Russians somewhere near the Baltic, apparently with the loss of its entire crew of four officers and six enlisted men, follows of course the pattern set by Marshal Tito's fliers in 1946, when he was still in the grace of Stalin and a devout follower of the party line. The Russian story is that the plane was over Latvian territory when it was intercepted by fighter planes and ordered to land at a Soviet base near Libau. Instead of obeying, says Mr. Vishinsky, the Soviet Foreign Minister, the Americans opened fire on the interceptors. One of them returned the fire, whereupon the American plane turned "toward the sea and disappeared."

How much of Vishinsky's story can be believed? In our opinion very little. First of all, Mr. Vishinsky's reputation for official veracity is not of the highest. Secondly, according to reports from the American Air Force and Naval authorities in Europe, the plane in question could scarcely have been any other than the Navy Privateer that last Saturday took off from Weisbaden for Copenhagen, lost contact by radio with its base and disappeared without trace, except for an overturned life raft said to have been sighted yesterday off the island of Bornholm. Thirdly, the American authorities insist that the plane was unarmed. Finally, the plane must have gone considerably off its course to have got into the vicinity of Libau, and there is as yet no evidence that it did so.

It is possible that the innumerable search flights now being made over the Baltic area may result in further incidents. The pilots of the search planes have of course been given orders to stay away from Soviet areas of the Baltic and also from the Karlskrona area of Sweden, which has been declared prohibited territory. It is easily possible, however, that one or more of these planes may wander off course and equally so that Soviet planes may do the same. Some Swedish sources have reported that some American planes have violated the Karlskrona area and that the Swedish government is considering a pro forma protest.

Thus the cold war grows warmer. As did the Yugoslavian episodes, the Baltic incident is certain to arouse great indignation here and perhaps demands for some form of reprisal. Yet it would be rash to assume that the incident was a deliberate act of provocation. The Russians undoubtedly believe a good deal of their own propaganda, and on their side nerves are probably even more tense and jittery than on ours. Until all the facts are known, the situation calls for both coolness and firmness.

Facts On Korea

Chairman Kee of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, in a letter elsewhere on this page, defends ECA Administrator Hoffman against our inference that he had glossed over fiscal conditions in Korea. We are happy to know that in Mr. Hoffman's testimony before the House committee he did dwell on the inflation problem. In his testimony before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee he was considerably more pointed. Though he asserted that Korean economic recovery was "nothing less than spectacular," he added that everything was not all rosy, and that there was a real threat that progress might be destroyed unless there was daily action to combat inflation. So Congress voted with its eyes open, after assurance that the American position respecting Korean finances would be made clear to the Korean government.

We are glad, to repeat, to see Mr. Hoffman's reputation for candor receive this affirmation. At the same time we must reiterate that the same candor did not mark the statements to press and public. For instance, the ECA statement of February 10, which is now described as a publicity "puff" summarizing Mr. Hoffman's review, made not one mention of Korean inflation or the tendency of Korean officials to build up private armies. It was because of our respect for Mr. Hoffman and our concern to see his record for straightforwardness maintained that we called attention to the matter at all.

THE CHANGE

I'll climb no more the green-hill,
The green-hill nevermore!
Nor walk the gravel path that winds
Up to my father's door.

They plowed the green-hill under,
'Tis naked as a floor.
Gone is the gravel foot-path,
And gone my father's door.

"Runaway Korea"

Referring to this Government's warnings to the Republic of Korea to correct its financial difficulties, a Washington Post editorial of April 11 says:

". . . The tough talk . . . would have been more honest, however, if it had preceded instead of followed the congressional vote for . . . economic aid to Korea. From the official statements at that time, one would have thought that Korea was well on the way to stability . . ."

The editorial makes further references to "apparent lack of candor" and to "soft-soaping."

In justice to the executive agencies concerned, I should like to point out that the facts were revealed candidly and fully to the Committee on Foreign Affairs by representatives of those agencies. In turn they were revealed to the House by the committee.

The committee's relevant report (House Report No. 1571, filed February 1, 1950) discusses the inflationary situation in Korea. It refers to confirmatory information supplied by the Economic Cooperation Administration. The report says further:

"In recognition of these difficulties, the Department of State has sent instructions to Ambassador John J. Muccio to make it abundantly clear to President Rhee of the Republic of Korea that the Korean government must put its financial house in order if it expects continued United States assistance . . ."

The report then states in detail the eight-point program for financial reform put forth to the Republic of Korea by the Economic Cooperation Administration.

Apparently The Post missed these facts. The record shows that they were not withheld from the Congress.

JOHN KEE,
Chairman, House Foreign Affairs Committee.

See editorial, "Facts on Korea."

"Charles R. Drew"

Thank you for your very fine April 6 tribute to Dr. Charles Drew. I would like to call your attention to the fact that the one thing that crystallized Dr. Drew's brilliance and made him a national as well as international figure was his organization of the blood bank, for the British Army and later for the American Army. JOY P. DAVIS.

Landover, Md.

It occurred to me that a very practical way of honoring his memory would be to erect a modern hospital to replace the antiquated and grossly overcrowded Freedmen's Hospital. The proposed hospital should be named the Charles Drew Memorial Hospital, and expenses for its construction could be entirely or partially defrayed by public contributions. I am certain that many citizens of Washington, regardless of race, creed, or color, would be glad to contribute to such a worthy cause.

Daylight Saving Poll

With the exception of Senator McCarthy's dizzy performance, Washington hasn't seen anything in a long time quite so cockeyed as this alleged and so-called "poll" and "expression of public opinion" on daylight saving.

Who was polled? No one in my office. No one in my house. None of my neighbors. I have asked in several restaurants, a barber shop, three taxicab drivers and four strangers, at random, in streetcars. Not one had been "polled" or knew anyone who had been.

And if the cops had nailed 200,000 opinions, what validity in a city of a million would that performance have? Whether one is for or against daylight saving, let's not be hoodwinked into calling this wretched travesty a "poll" that has even the remotest resemblance to representing or reflecting public opinion.

At that, remembering the unanimity with which the worthy Dr. Gallup and his professional brethren defeated Truman and elected Dewey for President, maybe our gallant cops didn't do too badly. AESOP.

McCarthy's Influence

This writer was privileged to be present when Owen Lattimore brilliantly cut Senator Joseph McCarthy down to size. Senator McCarthy's utter disregard for even the most elemental precepts of American justice brands him a character of highly dubious motives.

Although there is no doubt that the great majority of the audience in the Senate caucus room were convinced of Dr. Lattimore's innocence I did hear comments that were indicative of the degree McCarthy's charges have undermined public confidence in the Government of this country.

McCarthy's actions have brought discredit upon himself, his country, and certainly upon the legislative body of which he is a member. I suggest that the Senate would be fully warranted in formally censoring McCarthy.

Keep America Green

The $10,000 forest fire which swept over 800 acres of woodland near the Beltsville Research Center in nearby Maryland last week should give Capital area residents cause to think. Reports, after investigation, pointed to a cigarette discarded by a careless motorist as the cause of this costly fire.

This is not unusual. About 15,000 forest fires are started that way in the United States in an average year. Many are far more costly than last week's Beltsville holocaust. In an average year they burn over an area as large as the States of Maryland and New Jersey combined and destroy enough potential lumber to build 90,000 one-family homes.

Eroded hillsides, silt-laden streams, dried-up lakes and dwindling supplies of fish, game animals and birds, all are part of the price we Americans pay for forest fire. At least 90 percent of our forest fires are directly traceable to acts of careless or thoughtless people.

For some time now the forest industries of America along with Federal, State and local agencies, have been concentrating on this problem. Twenty-seven States, including Virginia, now have well-organized and active keep green programs under way. Results are encouraging. In the last 10 years the incidence of forest fire has been cut nearly in half. In 1939 4 percent of the total forest area of the Nation was burned over. In 1948 only 2.5 percent was burned. This means forest drain resulting from fire had been cut 43 percent in 10 years.

Reaction To The Irish Amendment

Perhaps by the time this reaches you the amendment moved by Mr. J. Fogarty in the House of Representatives on March 28 recommending "that dollar aid under the Marshall Plan be denied Britain until the partition of Ireland was ended," will have passed into the oblivion of ungracious forgotten things. Your own journal's emphatic disapproval does you infinite credit.

The amendment evidently does not represent the attitude of the American people as a whole, as evidenced by the later rejection of it. But the fact that the amendment at the time reflected the attitude of over 20 percent of the full elected membership of the House is anything but an easily forgotten jolt to Britain and certainly the British Commonwealth. The self-centered, obtuseness or, perhaps, growing international arrogance of a section of American public men, is somewhat appalling to those of us who know the unfortunate state of things from both sides.

First, as to the harvest of the great depression, which harrassed the wide world in the thirties. This commenced in the States by the withdrawal of loans and overdrafts by the banks to the equivalent of 33 billion pounds in sterling. The figures given are on the authority of the United States Commissioner of Labor Statistics. This depression was a world record. Britain becoming one of the worst sufferers. The havoc-working propensities of the deflation raised the principal and interest of her war debts since 1920 by 10 billion pounds. The reduction in the value of Britain's land, factories, mines and practically all her wealth is estimated to have been another 17 billion pounds.

During the calamitous first year of the recent World War, Britain "held the bridge" alone against desperate odds.

After the war a very sorry chapter followed for an exhausted but not broken-spirited Britain. She desperately needed money to carry on, and America was the only apparent, and not too willing, source. Lend-lease had been promptly cut off. The new bargain was indeed a hard one. Britain must first sign the Bretton Woods Agreement, which she very reluctantly did. At once the United States price controls were lifted so the new dollar loan could not buy anything like the value of dollar goods anticipated by the borrower.

Still worse had yet to be endured. In the judgment of many it has been well titled "The Gold Iniquity." The price of gold at the time of the Bretton Woods Conference was £15 sterling per ounce, yet the price under the agreement was fixed at £8 12s 3d. Outside the agreement, gold actually rose as high as £23 10s. Britain has had to risk the depletion of her meager gold reserves to pay her dollar imports at £8 12s 3d. Because of this deadly disparity in price the production value of gold in the British Commonwealth decreased between 1946 and 1948 by 89 million pounds.

After all this came the devaluation of sterling—marking Sir Stafford Cripps' strange somersault—which now requires still more pounds in sterling to purchase dollar goods, and to pay interest, let alone principal of Britain's dollar indebtedness, however well dressed in the garb of Marshall "Aid."

Surely there was little cause for over 20 percent of the total roll of the House of Representatives to discourteously suggest a humiliating ultimatum in connection with Britain's private affairs—or else!

Your own journal, I have pleasure in repeating, was forthright and cleanhanded in this matter, and we Britishers have cause to be truly grateful for your own outspoken dissent when the amendment was so unwisely moved. JAS. STOUT.

Contest For The Dollar

By Malvina Lindsay

Video's Blitz

YOU PROBARLY didn't notice it but signs of a minor revolution now under way showed up in the Easter parade. However, before you call the FBI let me hastily report this is not ideological. It affects chiefly our buying habits, vanity, leisure time activities, rearing of children.

Hard goods have taken their toll of spring finery. Pre-Easter apparel sales were disappointing in many parts of the country. Families buying motor cars, home furnishings, above all television sets, had less dollars left for fine feathers.

Yet nearly everybody looks spruce. The country is still prosperous. And a new tie on a man, a new hat on a woman can keep up the tradition of "smartness" that another revolution early in the century brought us.

That revolution was in clothing, mass production of which leveled economic classes, in appearance at least. Out of it developed the great American cult of clothes, the imoprtance of apparel to social and business success.

Through the years clothing became less costly, thanks to the machine. Today's clothing for the family costs half the number of work hours it did 34 years ago, according to a recent report of the National Industrial Conference Board. But the demands of city life have caused clothing to take a bigger wedge out of the consumer's dollar.

NOW the video set particularly is trying to muscle in on that wedge. Many a family whose children are clamoring for a television screen faces a problem in sacrifice. Shall last year's suits be worn another? Or from what other source can dollars be detoured?

Apparently television is often the winner. It has replaced radio as the chief product of radio and television manufacturers, the Bureau of Labor Statistics reports. And roof antennae for television are appearing even in low-cost housing projects.

The television boom is evidenced not only by its squeeze on apparel makers, book and magazine sellers, those engaged in commercial recreation, but also by its social repercussions. Parents, educators, club leaders, child phychologists are studying it, discussing it, arguing about it. True, they say, the video set is keeping people at home, but certainly not to sing songs about the piano. Nor to read books and magazines. Nor to discuss dilemmas of the day. Nor to exercise any muscles excepting the eyes.

Will it, as its critics fear, develop a Nation of passive spectators of life? Or will it, as its defenders insist, generally inform and stir mental curiosity?

Just now argument rages about its effect on children. Because of this the United Parents Associations of New York recently undertook a survey of what parents in 100,000 homes thought.

PRELIMINARY returns show that a fairly small proportion of children (though it was one third in one age group) are affected adversely. The effect varies according to age. Adverse effects included less interest in arts, crafts, outdoor active play, lower marks in school because of neglect of homework, irregular eating habits, emotional upsets.

This and other surveys show the importance of parental supervision of programs witnessed. Yet parents insist it is a superhuman job to pull a youngster away from a thriller on a video screen—or even to promote activities that will compete with it.

Television exponents point to the great educational possibilitie of their medium and say parents and teachers instead of merely lambasting television should try to understand its problems and help make it an educational force.

There are constant calls for action on the television front. Dr. George N. Shuster, president of Hunter College, New York, declares "unless something is done," television will make our cultural standards "more and more immature and silly." Recently 40 national organizations established a committee called Youth and Mass Media to work with the industries involved in a cleanup of blood and thunder movies, radio and television programs and comic books.

Because of television's great appeal to children its attendant revolution will reach deep into American life. A survey by the Burdick Junior High School of Stamford, Conn., showed that pupils with their own sets viewed television shows almost as many hours a week as they attended school.

Nonpartisan Inquiry

Senator Lodge is to be commended for his wise suggestion as to the method of investigating the McCarthy charges. He favors a nonpartisan commission with broad powers and acting in executive session.

The methods being used by the Tydings Subcommittee will never produce a satisfactory termination of the case. When it attempts to put McCarthy on trial and makes itself merely a platform from which the accused utter denials, it raises grave doubts in the public mind. When a committee loses public confidence, its ultimate verdict may be a source of even greater controversy than the charges it was organized to investigate. The Tydings Subcommittee should yield to a nonpartisan commission.

Today and Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

The Light Of Asia

SO MUCH has been said about what the West could or should do for, with, and about Asia that we forget what Asia can do about itself and for us. Yet the agreement which was reached last Saturday by Nehru and Liaquat for India and Pakistan is, I think we may say, the first great demonstration of high statesmanship by the new independent powers of Asia.

Lippmann

ALL THAT has preceded the Nehru-Liaquat pact has been the aftermath of the past. The partition of India, which was the last act of British rule, was a recognition, the unavoidable recognition, that a united India could exist only under foreign domination: that if the divided people of the subcontinent were to rule themselves, they could not live under one government. Partition was the price that had to be paid for freedom, and though all knew that it was a terrible price, it had to be paid.

It was not possible, however, to divide the subcontinent into two reasonably homogeneous and compact national states. The Moslem and Hindu communities are so intermingled that any partition line was bound to leave millions upon millions of Moslems in India and of Hindus in Pakistan. Even after the migration of 1947 when some 13 million people moved across the new frontiers, there, were still as many Moslems in India as there are Frenchmen in France, as many Hindus in Pakistan as there are, let us say, Nordics in Scandinavia.

IT IS to the solution of the problems that arise from these facts that Nehru and Liaquat have addressed themselves, knowing that the survival of India and Pakistan as independent states depends upon it. With the overriding importance of this problem for the security of hundreds of millions of human beings, it has been a kind of silly philistinism for anyone to keep nagging them to meddle ineffectually with the cold war.

Nehru and Liaquat have been faced with issues that in scale and complexity are as great as the issues that will determine the destiny of the whole of Europe, and in the long run these issues are as significant for the human race.

Their paramount task has been, and will long continue to be, to find a way by which the two states created by the partition can live together and become allies.

If they succeed, India and Pakistan will find the same kind of mutual security and advantage that Canada and the United States have found. For they are the two states which have emerged in the Twentieth Century from the partition of the British Indian Empire; Canada and the United States are the two nations which emerged in the Eighteenth Century from the partition of the British North American Empire.

If Nehru and Liaquat fail—where Canada and the United States have succeeded—India and Pakistan will lose their independence, and the misery of their people will be compounded by the anarchy of their governments.

The Nehru-Liaquat pact is particularly impressive because these two remarkable men have had the imagination and the audacity to grasp firmly the fundamental issue that divides their countries. The Pakistanis have believed—not without reason when they watched the Hindu fanatics—that India did not accept the partition and would seize the opportunity to "reunite" them by force. The Hindus have believed—not without reason when they watched the fanatic Moslems—that Pakistan, as an Islamic state, would sink back into the practice of forcible conversion. Until and unless these two irreconcilable and murderous ideological views are resolved and transcended, the awful conflict can never be ended.

The foundation of the Nehru-Liaquat pact is a firm commitment by the two governments that both will resist and suppress this ideological conflict. Both governments have proclaimed their belief in the equality of all their citizens. Both men have staked the future of their governments, their own careers and indeed their lives, upon the liquidation of their own fanatics. They have gone further than the statesmen of Europe dared or were willing to go at the conclusion of the religious wars. They have gone beyond the ideas of a division of religious influence with some toleration to the principle of human equality and religious freedom.

THIS BOLD attempt to accomplish now what it has taken Europe three centuries to do is not an empty idealism which fails to take account of the hard and bitter realities of the human condition. Nehru is a statesman who is also a prophet and Liaquat is a statesman with a sure and impressive competence in the world as it is. If they have been willing to grasp the nettle so firmly, it is because they have in them the instinct of survival. The will to live, that their nations should survive and flourish, has given them the faith to deal boldly with great matters.

Their example is a service to the whole world. For we have sunk to such depths of moral defeatism and stubborn sterility and intellectual impotence that we are riddled with unbelief and distrust of our own minds and with our own souls and our own capacity to be the masters of our fate.

Dirty Politics

Binaggio Murder, Pennsylvania Brawl

THE GANG murder of Charles Binaggio and his bodyguard in Kansas City is like a sudden and evil emanation against a dark and ominous sky. It is a sign for the whole world to see that gangsterism still prevails in Pendergast politics in President Truman's own bailiwick.

Childs

The murder on Truman Road will haunt the party in the coming campaign. It cannot be shrugged off. Binaggio was, after all, the intimate not merely of local politicos, including Democratic Gov. Forrest Smith, but of national leaders in the Truman organization.

Our political morality is in a downward spiral that would seem to be plummeting to zero. The machine gun and the smear are supplanting the orderly and reasonable discussion of issues and men.

In Pennsylvania the Republicans are in the middle of a party quarrel that has fallen almost to the Pendergast level. No murder has occurred as yet, but the charges of graft, crime and corruption are flying like big, thick, wet mud pies.

Gov. James Duff is fighting it out with the powerful machine bosses led by the venerable former Senator Joseph R. Grundy. Duff is campaigning for the Republican nomination for Senator against Congressman John C. Kunkel who is Grundy's man. The seat is now held by Senator Francis J. Myers, Democratic whip of the Senate.

KUNKEL in a recent speech charged Duff with "having made the most brazen political deal in Pennsylvania history—a bargain to hand control of the State government over to political corruptionists in return for their financial support and their controlled votes." That is strong language in the State that has produced some pretty high-flying corruptionists.

But Kunkel went on in a State-wide broadcast initiating his campaign to accuse Duff of "joining hands" with corrupt county bosses, a railroad lobby and a whisky lobby. Just to round things out, he accused Duff's candidate for the gubernatorial nomination, Judge John Fine, with being a "political judge who in flagrant defiance of ethics and decency has been the boss of Luzerne County, which has the most corrupt political machine to be found in Pennsylvania."

Governor Duff replied with a heated denial and the charge that "important men in the Grundy organization" were "guilty of corruption." He went on with some choice language about his opponent:

"Kunkel is not smart enough to have made those clever distortions himself. A slow-witted, spoiled rich boy who never grew up to be a real man, Kunkel is merely the Charlie McCarthy for the venom of Owlett (Republican National Committeeman G. Mason Owlett), one of the most unscrupulous men in the Republican Party in high place, either in or out of Pennsylvania."

HAROLD STASSEN, former Governor of Minnesota and now president of the University of Pennsylvania, is somewhere in the middle of this brawl, vaguely aligned with the Grundy faction and Jay Cooke, who has the Grundy-Owlett backing for the governorship. It is a fast, rough league for Harold to be traveling with. Whether he comes out unscarred in a relatively neutral position is anybody's guess.

All this pleases the Democratic politicians who have in recent years been hard at work exposing Republican chicanery in Philadelphia. Partly a result of these exposures the Democrats showed remarkable strength last fall, with Richardson Dilworth, a reform Democrat, elected treasurer of the city. Dilworth is expected to be the Democratic candidate for Governor.

Exposure is one thing. But a kind of pot-and-kettle name-calling is something else again. The net effect of that is to disgust voters who have no very close ties with either party.

A Senate investigation of organized national crime syndicates, such as Senator Estes Kefauver has been working hard for, might help to clear up the ugly mess. That is, it would help if it could be kept clear of political controls and oversensationalism. Mere headline hunting will contribute nothing but further confusion and disgust.

Those who inveigh most loudly and indignantly against the intervention of the Federal Government into the affairs of the States are more often than not precisely those who demand that the FBI be sent in to restore law enforcement.

The Federal Government can provide some assistance. It can break the networks that extend across State lines. But it cannot restore morality and decency to local politics.

suggest no Democratic candidates or persons actively identified with Democratic politics."

Lodge issued a statement pointing out that Ayer's appointment had been "unanimously" approved by the subcommittee the previous day.

"But the very next day, Mr. Ayer's perfectly legitimate political activity is not only criticized, but is actually attacked in a public statement," Lodge said.

"This is a gross discourtesy and injustice to Mr. Ayer, who did not seek the appointment in the first place and agreed to accept it at a sacrifice to himself and entirely as a matter of public duty."

Lodge also noted acidly that Ayer "by no means" would be the only man connected with the subcommittee who is engaged in politics. This apparently was a reference to the fact that three Senators on the subcommittee, including Tydings, are candidates for reelection this fall.

The flurry over Ayer's appointment came in a temporary lull in the inquiry into charges first raised by Senator McCarthy (R., Wis.).

Other developments in the matter yesterday consisted principally in attacks on the Administration by two Republican Senators.

One was Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio.), who declared that the Administration was "libeling" McCarthy, and prejudging his charges and that the Tydings Subcommittee was making "no real effort to find out the truth."

The other Republican attacker was Senator Jenner (Ind.). He lashed out at the entire Senate Foreign Relations Committee, charging that it has served as a "pawn" in the hands of Secretary of State Dean Acheson.

In a Senate speech Jenner denounced bipartisanship in foreign policy as a "gigantic fraud" used by President Truman "not to defeat the Communists, but to keep Republicans quiet."

Alfred Kohlberg, McCarthy's informant, said he had never charged that Lattimore was a Communist.

But he said he did consider Lattimore "very important" in America's change of policy toward China.

"I consider him very important, but I do not myself have evidence to support Senator McCarthy's statements," Kohlberg said. "I do not know what evidence Senator McCarthy has."

Kohlberg said FBI agents told him last Friday that FBI Chief J. Edgar Hoover had told them to "pick up all they could . . . right away" on United States Ambassador-at-Large Philip C. Jessup, another of McCarthy's targets.

He said the FBI intended to photograph "thousands of pages" of documents he has collected

Contempt Seen in Hawaii Quiz

Honolulu, April 12 (AP).—The House Un-American Activities Committee's right to ask the Communist question was challenged all over again today at its Hawaii hearings.

The United States Supreme Court only Monday upheld that right by denying a rehearing for two of 10 Hollywood movie writers held in contempt for refusing to answer the question.

Ralph Tokunaga, 33, a former local leader in Harry Bridges' CIO International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union, refused today to say if he was or had been a Communist.

Five committee members, who came here to dig into alleged Communist influence in Hawaii, immediately voted to begin contempt of Congress proceedings against him. They will ask the House for action when they return to Washington in about three weeks.

Myer C. Symonds, ILWU attorney, filed a motion to quash Tokunaga's subpena. He argued the statute creating the committee "is unconstitutional."

Chairman Walter (D., Pa.) told Symonds the motion was in improper form. He allowed the motion to be entered in the hearing record, however.

Walter said the committee will ask the House for a resolution requesting criminal prosecution of Tokunaga in United States Court here. Symonds reported he was ready to resist the contempt action.

Symonds told reporters his challenge is a new one and on a broader basis than that in the case of the Hollywood writers.

Makeshifts Failed To House Services

By Marshall Andrews
Post Reporter
(Fourth Article in a Series)

While money for new permanent housing was making its slow way through the legislative mill, the Army was doing what it could to meet the need by improvisation.

Where temporary wartime barracks were available these were fitted out as apartments if and when funds could be found for the purpose, even though this was admitted to be uneconomical because of the short useful life of the buildings. Sometimes buildings were turned over to soldiers who fitted them out with scrap materials in more or less haphazard fashion. On Okinawa, Quonset huts were set up and anchored against the typhoon with steel cables set in concrete. Yet all these makeshifts put together could not begin to meet the demand, and servicemen still were condemned to rent hovels at exorbitant prices.

Aside from humanitarian considerations, livable family housing was a matter of extreme concern to the services. It was a practical matter,' a business matter, and one which seriously affected their standing and efficiency. Not only do dissatisfied soldiers, sailors and airmen lower the morale of the entire service; they can't wait to stay out when their terms of service expire, and their skills and the money making them proficient are thus lost to the country.

Nothing much could be done in Alaska except fix up what buildings were already available and then wait for more money. But in occupied Japan and at some Pacific bases means have been found, by some economic juggling, to speed up housing and lower its cost.

From VJ-Day until December, 1948, the Japanese were required to build houses for United States troops as an occupation cost. When that was ended by a "stabilization directive" in December, 1948, housing still was critically needed for the families of men in the occupation forces. The question was: how to get it?

After many ideas were advanced, studied and rejected, former Undersecretary of the Army Tracy Voorhees went to Japan with one which looked good and presented it to Gen. Douglas MacArthur, who agreed at once and put his people to work on the details. The idea was this:

That the Japanese should use a stated part of ECA counterpart funds, the funds in Japanese currency with which they are required to match ECA expenditures locally, to build houses for rent to United States servicemen. The servicemen would pay their rent with the cash commutation for quarters, which would be paid to them in any event where public quarters were not available. Thus amortization of the cost of the construction would take place out of necessary military expenses and eventually the buildings would revert to the Japanese economy.

Meanwhile, the importance of Okinawa had become greatly enhanced by the decision which made it a major outpost of the U. S. defense perimeter. The island was to be the site of extensive military construction and immediately required housing for troops already stationed there. But Okinawa, though occupied as Japanese territory, presented a vastly different problem than did Japan itself.

Even discounting the destruction of its meager facilities during the 1945 invasion, it was not at its best prepared to accept a large military population superimposed on its civilian economy. There were no utilities, no electricity, water or sewage systems, no roads.

It promised to be a costly operation, so costly in fact that many years must pass before it could be completed with the annual increments of funds which might be expected. Voorhees went to Okinawa in September, 1949, to find out if the plan adopted in Japan could somehow be applied to Okinawa. Convinced that it could, he arranged to have a team of eight engineers assigned to MacArthur to develop a type of housing which could be built largely with materials obtainable in Japan or in former Japanese territory.

The theory was that use of Japanese counterpart funds to the fullest extent in Okinawa to purchase Japanese materials and pay Japanese labor not only would cut the cost tremendously but would speed up the work. In November, 1949, the engineer team reported to MacArthur, who approved the program and got funds released last January to start work. The result, said Voorhees, is that the proportion of materials to be furnished by the Japanese economy and paid for in counterpart funds has been raised from an estimated 15 percent of the total cost of construction to 75 percent.

Not only will this scheme save dollars and time. It will provide Okinawans with work now and for a long time to come with a source of income at no additional cost to the United States.

(Friday's article will deal with appropriations.)

Truman Popularity Reported Losing Ground With Voters

By George Gallup
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., April 12.—President Truman's proposed speaking tour across the country next month is well timed from the Democratic point of view.

The latest survey on President Truman's popularity, based on a question that has been put periodically to a balanced cross-section of voters every few months for the past five years, shows the following:

"Do you approve or disapprove of the way Truman is handling his job as President?"

Approve	37%
Disapprove	44
Undecided	19
	100%

This represents a drop in presidential popularity as compared with earlier surveys. However, the peculiar feature of Mr. Truman's popularity over the years has been its steep rises and sharp drops, all of which have been reported in Institute surveys.

These studies have measured and reported his popularity when it stood at an all-time high of 87 percent shortly after he took office five years ago tomorrow, and at a low 36 percent in 1946 when the Democrats lost control of Congress.

During the past year, the Truman popularity index has gone as high as 60 percent. Here is the trend since last summer:

TRUMAN POPULARITY

	July, 1949	Jan., 1950	TODAY
Approve	57%	45%	37%
Disapprove	26	40	44
Undecided	17	15	19
	100%	100%	100%

Mr. Truman has several times in the past staged dramatic comebacks in popularity, so that the current low point shown in the survey may be a temporary dip to be followed by another sharp rise, if the pattern of the past is repeated.

In 1946, to cite only one example, his political stock dropped to a new low just before the congressional elections, with only 32 percent approving him in the Institute's survey while 53 percent disapproved him and 15 percent were undecided. In the election some two weeks later, the Republicans gained control of both houses of Congress.

Yet so rapid was the President's political "recovery" that within five months an overwhelming majority, 60 percent, were again saying they approved of him, while the disapproval vote had shrunk to only 23 percent, with 17 percent undecided.

As reported last week, Mr. Truman continues far in the lead as the choice of Democratic Party members for renomination in 1952.

Probably few political leaders in American history have had such enormous upswings and downswings in popularity as Mr. Truman during his tenancy of the White House. That is why political observers will be watching his forthcoming political tour carefully for signs of a new Truman upswing.

While it is impossible to fix any particular act or event as the cause of the drop in presidential popularity, past experience with similar surveys indicates that events do have a definite effect upon the popularity index. The prolonged coal strike during the winter may have been an important factor.

The increasing tenseness of the world situation, the Communist gains in Asia, the constant criticism leveled at the State Department—all those, too, may have had something to do with the decline.

City Asked to License Cats as Well as Dogs

Los Angeles, April 12 (AP).—City Council President Harold Henry relayed to his colleagues a suggestion for helping solve the city's prospective $8,500,000 financial deficit.

It came from a constituent, Henry said, and involves licensing all the two million cats at the same fee as dogs ($2 male, $4 female).

Illinois House Members Win Renomination

Chicago, April 12 (U.P.).—Democratic and Republican leaders both claimed today their hands were strengthened for the November general election as a result of the Illinois primary.

In the chief race of the Nation's first scheduled off-year primary, former Representative Everett M. Dirksen easily won the GOP nomination for the United States Senate to oppose Majority Leader Scott W. Lucas.

Lucas had no opposition on the Democratic ticket.

William G. Stratton, former Congressman-at-large, won the GOP nomination for State Treasurer—the primary's hottest race—over six foes largely on the strength of downstate support.

Both Democratic and Republican Congressmen with opposition won handily for renomination. These included Democrat Adolph J. Sabath, dean of the House and chairman of the Rules Committee, who is seeking his twenty-third consecutive term.

Of the State's 26 House seats, Republicans hold 14 and Democrats 12. The GOP lost six seats in the 1948 Democratic landslide.

Two former Republican Congressmen who were ousted in 1948, Fred Busbey in the Second District and Richard Vail in the Third, won nominations in comebacks.

A dead man also was nominated. Representative Ralph E. Church's name appeared on the GOP ballots, which were printed before his death last month, and he outpolled several write-in candidates. A GOP district committee will name a candidate to run in the fall.

Cook County Balloting Pleases Gabrielson

On the basis of returns in the Illinois primaries, Republican National Chairman Guy G. Gabrielson predicted yesterday that GOP candidate Everett M. Dirksen will beat Senator Scott W. Lucas (D., Ill.) in the November election.

"The primaries brought out the largest turnout of Republicans in Cook County (Chicago) in many years," he said. "About 300,000 voted in the primary and this vote was obtained without strenuous organization. The vote in the country towns of Illinois was the greatest on record.

In contrast, he said the Democrats expected 550,000 votes in their Chicago stronghold and got only about 400,000.

200 Honor Memory of FDR at Hyde Park

Hyde Park, N. Y., April 12 (U.P.). About 200 persons, including his widow and several former Cabinet members, attended simple noon services today commemorating the fifth anniversary of the death of President Franklin D. Roosevelt.

Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt came early to the family burial plot on the Roosevelt estate and placed a bouquet of spring jonquils on her husband's grave. She and her son, Elliott, were the only members of the family present.

President Truman sent a palm wreath, which was placed on the grave by David K. Niles.

The Rev. Gordon L. Kidd, rector of St. James Episcopal Church which the late President attended throughout his life, read the Episcopal memorial service.

Others at the ceremony included former Vice President Henry A. Wallace and Mrs. Wallace; former Postmaster General Frank Walker; former Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, jr.; President William Green of the American Federation of Labor; Jacob Potofsky, president of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers Union, and Isadore Lubin, a former adviser to Mr. Roosevelt.

Byrd Demands Truman Prove Anti-Socialism

White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., April 12 (AP).—Senator Byrd (D., Va.) challenged President Truman today to show he is against socialism.

Byrd, a critic of the Administration's deficit spending policies, said adoption by Congress of what the President calls his "Fair Deal" program would "commit us irrevocably to a socialistic state from which there can be no retreat."

In an address prepared for a meeting of the Southwest Electric Exchange here, Byrd said that instead of indulging in "invective speech" the President ought to answer these questions:

"If he says he is against socialism, why is he advocating the pressurizing of Congress to adopt socialized medicine?

"If he is against socialism, why is he advocating the Brannan plan, which inevitably means socialized agriculture?

"If the President is opposed to socialism, why is he advocating another extension of socialized housing?

"If the President is opposed to socialism, why is he constantly advocating an extension of the number of those who receive Government benefits?"

$850,000 Pledged To Jewish Campaign

Donations of $850,000 were pledged last night at the Advanced Gifts Dinner opening the Washington United Jewish Appeal campaign.

More than 300 Washingtonians attended the Shoreham Hotel dinner, at which Senator Herbert H. Lehman (D., N. Y.) called for United States intervention in achieving a firm peace in the Middle East.

Lehman charged that the "Arab states are doing more than just talking of a second round" of war with Israel. He said there is a "great deal of evidence to prove that they are preparing for another war.

"The possibility of another conflict in the Middle East," he continued, "is not merely a threat to the existence of Israel. It is a danger to world peace.

"I firmly believe that it is the responsibility of our Government, which is keenly interested in preserving world peace, to take a firm stand in speeding a peace settlement in the Middle East."

Lehman urged continued support of UJA.

"We have not yet reached the point," he said, "where we can regard crisis and emergency as things of the past. Not while oppression and poverty endanger the status of 900,000 Jews in North Africa and other Moslem areas. Not while 350,000 Jews are still waiting in the DP centers for a new home in Israel and the United States. Not while many thousands of others must be got out of eastern Europe before the doors of rescue are closed."

Another speaker, Judge Michael N. Musmanno of Pittsburgh, former judge at the Neurnberg trials, criticized Senator Taft's position on the war crime trials. Taft has called the trials "a blot on the American record that we shall long regret," the jurist said.

"I am certain that the day will come . . . when Americans will be as proud of what we did at Neurnberg," Musmanno said, "as we are now proud of Gettysburg."

Other speakers included Rabbis Isadore Breslau, general chairman of the Washington campaign, and Norman Gerstenfeld, and Joseph Cherner, president of the Washington UJA Corporation. Leopold V. Freudberg was chairman of the dinner, and Rabbi Solomon Metz delivered the invocation.

Last nights $850,000 in donations will go towards Washington's 1950 UJA goal of $2,500,000. More advance gifts were expected to be announced today. UJA's national goal this year is $272,455,800.

Man, Daughter, 18, Charged With Statutory Offense

A 47-year-old refrigerator serviceman and his 18-year-old daughter were held yesterday in Municipal Court for grand jury action on charges of incest.

Save Freedom, Dewey Urges

scribed as the present crisis in its foreign affairs.

He said Republican leaders should be called in for consultation "before, not after, decisions in the shaping of policy are made." Bipartisanship, Dewey said, "cannot be merely a ratification of policies determined by one party."

But he said Congress should not be expected to serve as a rubber stamp as a result and that bipartisanship "should apply in all decisive areas of foreign policy, not merely in those where it is found convenient or politically expedient."

Dewey offered a program to win the cold war. In it he urged reversal of "the ominously rising trend toward isolationism," since Americans could not survive alone in a Communist world.

He said the Nation should "reject the notion that war is inevitable." He declared the Nation needs a better intelligence system —"not a musical comedy affair."

He called for an intensified propaganda service "to reach the enslaved peoples of Russia and her satellite subjects."

He said the Nation should decide what it wants. In both world wars, he said, the Nation asked nothing and got just that. "Not knowing what we did want, we have again got nothing but a bad peace and a rapidly shrinking free world."

He cited the need for a United States of Europe to serve as "a cornerstone of a free world." He said the United States should "press and prod this program forward to a successful conclusion" as a prerequisite of Marshall Plan aid.

He said something should be done quickly about the Far East. He made no definite recommendations but said "here almost any action is better than no action." Finally, he said American self-interest required a program for development of backward sections of the world to "create great strength and friendships in underdeveloped areas."

Senate Group Rejects Ban On Liquor Ads

The Senate Commerce Committee voted at a closed meeting yesterday to reject a bill to outlaw liquor advertising.

Chairman Edwin C. Johnson (D., Colo.) said the vote was 6 to 3, but declined to say how committee members lined up.

The bill was sponsored by Senator William Langer (R., N. Dak.) and was similar to a measure sponsored or years by former Senator Arthur Capper (R., Kans.)

It would have banned liquor, wine and beer advertisements from newspapers, magazines, radio and television by making it unlawful to advertise any kind of alcoholic beverage through the mails or over the air.

Spokesmen for dry organizations and religious groups strongly supported the measure at public hearings held by the committee early this year. They said liquor ads are "seducing" American youth.

$40-Million Pepco Issues Anticipated

By S. Oliver Goodman

New financing and refunding of Potomac Electric Power Co. for this year may amount to 40 million dollars, according to current conjecture in local investment banking circles.

Of this amount, it is anticipated that Pepco may issue 30 million dollars in new bonds. Another 10 million dollars, it is believed, may be raised through the issue of additional common stock with "rights" to be given present stockholders.

Bulk of the new money would be designed to refund at lower cost 20 million dollars in outstanding 3¼s, due 1966, and to repay five million dollars borrowed from banks last January on 2 percent notes payable within nine months. Rest would provide Pepco with additional construction funds.

Some local quarters were hopeful that a clew to this year's financing plans might be given at the annual stockholders' meeting scheduled for Saturday at 10 a. m.

Last year, Pepco sold 10 million dollars in first mortgage 2⅞s per cent bonds and another seven million dollars was raised through the sale of 592,250 additional common shares.

Meanwhile, Pepco reported yesterday that March sales for Washington and vicinity totaled 186,841,277 kilowatt hours, an increase of 8.25 percent over the same 1949 month.

For the first quarter, area sales aggregated 550,696,616 kilowatt hours, a gain of 4.84 percent over the corresponding period last year.

EXTRA DIVIDEND: Directors of National Savings & Trust Co. declared an extra dividend of $1 a share on capital stock in addition to the usual quarterly dividend of $2 a share. President Bruce Baird reported yesterday. Both dividends are payable May 1 to stock of record April 21. A similar extra was paid last year.

WHO'S WHO TODAY: Frank M. Perley is chairman in charge of arrangements for the spring meeting of the D. C. Bankers Association next Monday at the Columbia Country Club. Perley is assistant vice president and trust investment officer of the American Security & Trust Co . . . Charles E. Phillips, president, and Gilbert C. Clark, executive vice president of the Equitable Life Insurance Co. of Washington will attend a seminar April 13 and 14 in Boston, sponsored by 10 insurance firms . . . A banquet will be held May 2 in honor of Miss Elinor M. Hickerson, cashier and office manager of the Washington office of Mutual Benefit Life Insurance Co., who is marking her twentieth anniversary with the branch . . . Horace W. Neilson has become the third member of the DuFour Agency, Pacific Mutual Life Insurance Co., to win membership in the Million Dollar Production Club.

IMPROVEMENT: First quarter earnings of the City Bank showed a slight gain over the 1949 period, President Clarence F. Burton reported at the annual meeting Tuesday. Burton was reelected president and board chairman and other offices and directors were also reelected.

PARLEY: Thomas E. Mead, Deposit Insurance Corp.'s chief of field audit will address the auditor's section of the D. C. Bankers Association at a dinner meeting tonight in the Burlington Hotel. His subject will be "Assessment Base for Federal Deposit Insurance." Fulton H. Dixon, section chairman, reported yesterday that about 20 local bankers will attend the eastern regional conference of the National Association of Bank Auditors and Comptrollers in Miami, Fla., April 18 to April 22.

ODD LOTS: The SEC has postponed until May 22 scheduled hearings in connection with proceedings against Otis & Co. . . . March output of 7,446,307 net tons of steel was about a million tons under the record 1949 month . . . Claude Neon, Inc., has acquired 100 percent of the stock of Standard Electronics, Inc. . . . With complete financing arranged on "very favorable terms," work on the new 20-million-dollar Hotel Statler and office building in Los Angeles will start June 15 . . . Richmond Reserve Bank reports Washington furniture sales up 6 percent for February and 8 percent higher for first two months this year . . . Capital Airlines reports record Easter weekend business . . . Wall Street Journal estimates that first quarter earnings in the oil industry were about 18 percent lower than in the same 1949 period.

Mutual Life Dedicates New 25-Story Home

New York, April 12 (AP).—The Mutual Life Insurance Co. of New York today dedicated its new 25-story home office building. The dedication and opening of the building for company use was on the 108th anniversary of Mutual's founding.

New York Cotton

New York, April 12 (AP).—Cotton futures registered losses of 10 to 25 cents a bale in slow dealings today. The market was on the defensive following reports that several leading textile mills have started to curtail production because of lagging demand for cotton goods and continued declines in prices. Rallying tendencies in futures were also discouraged by persistent liquidation of the large open interest in nearby may contracts prior to first notice day on April 25.

Movies Plan Telecasts Over Private Circuits

By Wayne Oliver

NEW YORK, April 12 (AP).—You're probably going to see television on the screen of your favorite movie theater one of these days—but a different brand from that on your set at home.

That's the turn taken in planning by motion picture theater owners to meet television's rising competition and bolster their sagging ticket sales.

The planning looks toward special telecasts over closed circuits, not available to home sets, of stage shows by big name performers, Broadway plays, concerts and similar entertainment. This would be in addition to the regular feature film.

It might well get under way in this fashion: the stage show of a movie palace also would be shown by television in neighborhood houses throughout the area—or even on a Nation-wide scale.

But whatever the final form, theater television is going to be different from what you can get on your home set. Among the reasons, according to Robert H. O'Brien, secretary and treasurer of the United Paramount Theaters and co-chairman of the Television Committee of the Theater Owners of America, are these:

1. The theater audience composed of possibly several hundred persons relaxed in the movie house for a two-hour stay is vastly different from the family group watching the video set at home, subject to the usual household interruptions and distractions. What is good home television might be a dud in the theater, and vice versa.
2. Because your theater video picture will be enlarged to many times the size of the screen on your home set, it will have to be of better quality.
3. Several hundred theaters with their tens of thousands of ticket sales can afford television programs of a type that would be beyond the reach of a sponsor broadcasting his show to home sets.

Then there's the very obvious point that it would be little added inducement for you to go to the movie house if its television programs were the same as those you could see at home.

Although ticket sales at movie theaters are running substantially behind last year, O'Brien says there's little difference between rate of decline in television and non-television areas. So many other factors have greater effect on ticket sales, he explains, it's difficult to measure just how much is due to television.

Orchestra Seats

As for theater television, O'Brien declares "We could give to people throughout the country an orchestra seat at the best Broadway shows. This would embrace not only the stage shows in motion picture theaters, but also many features such as drama, opera and ballet, which are found in the country's major cultural centers, but are not so readily available in smaller cities."

Why not simply make films of these events and distribute them to theaters, instead of bothering with a television hookup? O'Brien and others in the theater industry believe there will be strong appeal in "the immediacy and spontaniety" of their television shows.

They figure you will get an added kick out of seeing a big show as it is presented, rather than a film made weeks or months earlier and which may be the result of numerous retakes and careful editing to eliminate fluffs.

The television hookup also would enable them to present major events and possibly exclusive showings of top sports spectacles.

THE exact manner in which the programs will be transmitted to theaters has not been determined. The Federal Communicatings Commission has scheduled hearings on the problem.

The big question is whether the movie houses will set up their own television circuits—probably using microwave radio beams—or will lease circuits from the telephone companies which now operate most of the network facilities for broadcast television.

The Theater Owners Association and several movie theater chains have asked the FCC to set aside special television channels for theater use.

Meanwhile, several theaters over the country already have installed big screen television to bring their customers major special events off the air. While their showings are of programs that can be seen at home, they enable the movie-goer to attend a film showing without missing the big event on television.

Richard L. Coe has been ill. His column will be resumed tomorrow morning, a review of "Francis," opening this morning at Keith's.

Philadelphia Symphony Heard In Final Washington Concert

By Paul Hume

Eugene Ormandy and the Philadelphia Orchestra played their final Washington concert of the season last night in Constitution Hall.

With Artur Rubinstein as soloist, they offered Wagner's Good Friday Spell, Beethoven's first symphony, and the second piano concerto of Brahms. For Wagner, the Philadelphia Orchestra is ideal. Their tone, beautiful balance, and unforced style of playing is a dream. Long tenuous phrases of the serene scene moved calmly by as in a religious procession. It was a rare moment.

Beethoven's first symphony has charms not found in any of his later works. Its finale moves with a bounce and spirit like the genius of Mozart to which it pays tribute. We marvel that its author ever left such music for later, more ponderous measures.

After a rather moderate opening, the symphony moved with buoyant charm. The packed house gave it an extended ovation.

Rubinstein was at one time an ideal pianist for the mighty Brahms B Flat concerto. His recording of nearly 20 years ago proves that beyond doubt. But he has passed that period of playing. Today he is capricious, wilful, and proud of his own accomplishments.

Thus he can play with breathtaking beauty in one phrase, and with amazing carelessness or arbitrary tone in the next. Last night he showed that he remembers the spaciousness of the Brahms. The manner of attacking certain big lines was thrilling. And the sustained mood of the slow movement was appropriately tender.

Paul Olefsky, with his solo cello, joined Rubinstein to make the andante moving. But over and over Rubinstein ignored Brahms' dynamic markings to play loud passages softly, and soft passages with forte tone. And at one point in the second movement, he attempted an unmarked ritard, only to have Ormandy continue at the proper speed. The pianist then had to drop his inartistic ideas and catch up with the conductor.

Movie Morals Prober Wants Data on Mass Behavior Only

By the United Press

Judge Stephen S. Jackson, who will investigate Hollywood's morals for Congress, left for the film colony yesterday with a pledge not to single out any individual for criticism.

Jackson, a consultant to the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee, said that while he has no set program for his "lone wolf" inquiry, he will concentrate on Hollywood's mass behavior rather than checking up on individuals.

He said in an interview he has "no idea" of talking with actors, actresses, producers or writers about how they spend their leisure hours.

"That is not my job," he said. "I will not elicit or look for any information as far as it concerns a person individually. I am after an over-all picture of the current situation and constructive suggestions on how to deal with such problems as may exist.

"I am going to try to make an objective appraisal of the situation as it is. But I have no idea of going there with the thought of getting any derogatory information about any individual."

Jackson was appointed by Chairman Edwin C. Johnson (D., Colo.), who has waxed increasing indignant over the extramarital romance of Italian film director Roberto Rossellini and movie actress Ingrid Bergman.

Johnson, self-described disillusioned former fan of Miss Bergman, will use Jackson's recommendations as the basis for hearings on his bill to license motion pictures, actors and producers. The hearings are scheduled to open May 15, and probably will run some time.

Movie Stars Won't Hide From Morals Inquiry

Hollywood, April 12 (U.P.).—Movie stars served notice today that they aren't going to scurry into hiding when Judge Stephen Jackson arrives to look into movietown morals.

The judge was appointed to gather material for Senator Ed Johnson's hearings on "sinful" Hollywood May 15. He'll find Hollywood "business as usual," the film colony agreed.

"He'll discover that our country's laws and good public taste seem to be ample to take care of the wayward movie actor, baseball player or Congressman," said Van Heflin.

Gale Storm, who teaches Sunday school on her day off, said she thought the Senator's committee will be "disappointed at Jackson's report."

Marine Jet Plane Crashes and Explodes

Cherry Point, N. C., April 12 (AP).—An F-2-M Banshee jet plane attached to the Marine Air Corps Base here crashed and exploded 10 miles north of Kinston today.

The air base identified the pilot as Capt. Arvene J. Kugler, 29, of Culbertson, Nebr.

Zoning Body Bans Telecasts In Home Area

The District Zoning Commission yesterday rejected an amendment to its regulations which would have allowed television stations to broadcast from transmitter sites in residential areas.

At the same time, it permitted Station WOIC, which had sought the amendment, to broadcast from its present residential site at 40th and Brandywine sts. nw., by rezoning the land. This action, also sought by several other land owners, rezoned to commercial use two blocks bounded by Wisconsin ave. and 40th, Chesapeake and Albemarle sts.

Of the four television stations here, only WMAL-TV now could be affected by rejection of the amendment. Its transmitting tower is on residential property at American University, Massachusetts and Nebraska aves. nw. The others are on commercial land or outside the city.

The commission rezoned a tract east of Bladensburg rd., ne., at V. st., where Sears Roebuck and Co. has announced plans to build a million-dollar warehouse. It also approved an amendment to zoning regulations increasing the maximum size of private garages from 400 and 800 square feet to 450 and 900 square feet.

Deferred for further study was another amendment which would strike out the requirement that dry cleaning establishments be located at least 75 feet from any residence. A study of the possible nuisance factor will be made by a committee of District and industry officials, according to the commission's executive officer Robert O. Clouser.

Arlington Plans No Police Charge Action

Arlington County Manager A. T. Lundberg said yesterday that charges of police brutality in connection with the arrest of three alleged housebreakers, did not "warrant action at this time."

He said he had completed his investigation of available evidence against two unnamed county policemen and found nothing to justify trial board action. However, he said, final disposition of the charges would be deferred, pending trial of the three men, "in case any other information is brought out."

The complainants, all of whom were indicted for housebreaking earlier this month, are William Kirkpatrick, 26, and Cleaven Cordell, 32, both of 1415 1st st. nw., and Charles Williams, 45, of 1816 9th st. nw.

Building Fight Goes to Court

A Silver Spring bowling alley operator took his building permit fight against the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission to court yesterday.

Eugene J. C. Raney, owner of a bowling alley at 961 Bonifant st., sought a permit for an addition to the building. The permit was denied by the commission on the grounds that the addition would encroach in the right-of-way proposed for the widening of Bonifant st.

Through his attorney, Stedman Prescott, jr., Raney contended in the Montgomery County Circuit Court yesterday that the ordinance under which the refusal was made was unconstitutional. The attorney said the provision permitted the taking of his client's property "without due process of law and just compensation."

The suit was taken under advisement by Judge Charles W. Woodward.

Cocktail Party To Mark Arrival Of Baby Elephants

Washington, which is a great city for cocktail parties, will have what is probably a unique one Saturday: In honor of two baby elephants.

Formal invitations for cocktails "to celebrate the safe arrival of 'Ashok' and 'Shanti'" have been sent out by Col. and Mrs. M. K. Unni Nayar. He is director of information for the Indian Embassy.

Ashok and Shanti are one-year-old baby elephants which have been given by Prime Minister Nehru of India to the children of America and the Washington Zoo. They're due to arrive Friday by boat in New York and will be presented by Ambassador Madame Vijaya Pandit in ceremonies Saturday at the Zoo.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

DURHAM, N. C., April 12.—On the nearby Duke University campus 15 years ago, the cock of the walk, the man who could do no wrong, was Ace Parker. As the school's All-America halfback, he had the coeds giddy, and the boy students in a worshipful frenzy.

The Ace is still around these parts, managing the Durham baseball team of the Class B Carolina League. The slavish devotion to Parker in North Carolina hasn't slackened much, apparently. Last season the Carolina Baseball Writers Association voted him the league's "Manager of the Year." No deterrent was the fact that his team finished sixth.

POVICH

At Duke, they're still somewhat miffed at all of this recent acclaim for Charley Justice of North Carolina U. as the greatest football player who ever came out of the Tar Heel State. Mr. Ted Mann, Duke's devoted publicist, submits that it's no contest between Parker and Justice.

"The Ace went from Duke into the pro football league and was as great there as in college ball," points out Mann. "When did Justice ever make the all-pro team?" Quite beside the point, he says, is the fact that Justice hasn't yet graduated from college.

IF JUSTICE SURPASSED Parker on any count in their respective college football careers, it was as a forward passer, but Mann kisses off that claim airly enough. "The Ace didn't do much passing for Wallace Wade," he says, "Wade explains that. He says Parker was too valuable a receiver to be wasted as a passer."

Parker's greatest day in college was in his next-to-last game for Duke when North Carolina was supposed to beat the Blue Devils in their annual game. When the touchdown that Parker scored early in the game didn't stand up and Carolina tied it up at the half 7-7, the Ace took personal charge of the final half, Mann recalls.

"The first thing he did," Mann recollected, "was to pick up the second half kickoff and take it 105 yards to a touchdown through the middle of the Carolina team. Nobody laid a hand on him. It ended 27-7, Duke. Parker scored all our points. The only thing he missed doing was holding the ball for himself on the points after touchdown."

PARKER PUT in a year playing with the Philadelphia Athletics as a second baseman before he joined the Brooklyn Dodgers of the NFL. Connie Mack became quite unsmitten with him, and bade him godspeed on a pro football career when the Ace refused to go back to the minors for more seasoning. It was the finest thing that ever befell the football Dodgers.

With the Brooklyn pros, the Ace was a one-man gang. He was the tailback in their single wing formation. He threw the passes, kicked the points, ran the tackles, played safety, and on occasion stared down replacements sent in to relieve him. He just missed beating Sammy Baugh out for the league passing championship, won the punting title, and twice was named to the all-pro league team.

None of the Virginia colleges of his native State could make it interesting enough for Parker when he got out of Portsmouth High in 1933, but Wade's scouts could. It was in an era when the NCAA wasn't so inquisitive. And when the Ace was through with pro ball, Wade happily took him on as an assistant coach.

HE'S STILL ASSISTING Wade at Duke as backfield coach, even while on the payroll of the Durham club in the last month of the baseball season. It works out nicely for the Ace. He coaches at Duke by day, manages Durham by night, and nobody squawks at his working for two masters because nobody ever gets mad with the Ace in this community.

On that January 1, in 1938, when an unbeaten, untied, unscored on Duke team moved into the Rose Bowl to play Southern California, and was beaten, 7-3, in the last 40 seconds of play, the Trojans weren't actually the first to score on Duke.

"True enough, we finished our regular season without being scored on," relates Mann, "but nobody said anything about that stop-over we made in Lubbock, Tex., on our way to the Coast. Wade had his regular team in a tough scrimmage, and Parker was playing safety for the Rinky-Dinks. It was for keeps, too. The Ace picked up a punt on his 20-yard line and scored without being touched.

"We hushed that up, though."

Red Auerbach Quits Tri-City

Arnold (Red) Auerbach yesterday quit as coach of Tri-City of the National Basketball Association and revealed here that he was thinking of giving up coaching.

Auerbach, who sounds like a tired man at 32, gave ill health his reason for getting out now.

Red brought pro basketball here when he organized the Washington Caps. He steered them to two Eastern Division titles and a three-way tie for second in three years in the Basketball Association of America.

Auerbach said, "This coaching's a tough racket. Right now, I'm wondering whether or not it's worth it for a family man. I'm awfully tired. The traveling, irregular hours and tremendous pressure make it too killing."

In the next breath Red said, "Maybe I will coach again. It doesn't make much difference to me whether it's pro or college ball. Two or three weeks might make me change my mind about going into business here."

Truman Gets Pass, Tells Griffith Arm Is Ready

President Truman reported his throwing arm in good shape yesterday as he received his annual season passes for the American and National League baseball games.

He promised to throw out the first ball at the American League opener here next Tuesday between the Washington Nats and Philadelphia Athletics.

Clark Griffith, president of the Washington Club, presented the American League pass. Ford Frick, president of hte National League, gave Mr. Truman the complimentary ticket for the National circuit.

It was Griffith's thirty-seventh visit to the White House for this purpose.

Irked Over Chico

Appling Quits Club in Huff, Paper Reports

Chicago, April 12 (AP).—The Chicago Tribune reported tonight that Luke Appling, 41-year-old shortstop for the Chicago White Sox, has left the team at Memphis, Tenn., in a huff.

At Roswell, Ga., Appling's wife said there was nothing to the rumor that he left the club. She said Appling just stopped by at Roswell and left to join the club at Memphis. Mrs. Appling said she was indignant about the rumor and that Luke would be too, if he knew about it.

"The club's official family insisted Ol' Luke would rejoin the club in time for the city series opener Friday," the newspaper said, adding:

"Among the reasons advanced for Luke's defection were his disapproval of the team's spring training activities. It seems Appling's sensitivities, which have tolerated many things in the course of two decades, were jarred by bus travel to and from night games.

"It also was reported that Luke is not ready to retire from active work, and thus was a little more than irked over the way his successor, Chico Carresquel, moved into the shortstop post."

At Memphis, White Sox officials denied that there was any rift between Appling and the club. Charles Comiskey 3d, White Sox vice president, said, "Luke is given permission to go to his Georgia home every year when the club is on its way north. He has left the club, but it is temporary and with our permission."

General Manager Frank Lane said, ". . . There may be a little resentment. Luke has played shortstop for 20 years. He volunteered to play first base if Jack (Onslow, manager) needed him."

Rogers Flattens Tony Martinelli

"Nature Boy" Buddy Rogers used a piledriver and body press to pin Tony Martinelli in 14 minutes last night in the featured wrestling bout at Turner's Arena.

In other bouts, the midget team of Sky and Low Low disposed of Tiny Roe with a dropkick and body press in 19½ minutes and Miguel Torres lost by disqualification to Ken Ackles in 19 minutes.

Sid Has No Pain, Allows Durham One Earned Run

By Shirley Povich
Post Reporter

Durham, N. C., April 12.—The Nats, gaining in fame as the scourge of the Carolina Class B leagues, paused here today and bumped off the native nine, 15 to 6, without special effort.

It was notable in two respects (1), Sid Hudson had his first outing on the mound since complaining of a shoulder injury 15 days ago, and (2) the Nats came up with their biggest inning of the spring—eight runs in the fourth.

Hudson wasn't beating much, what with Durham having finished sixth in the Carolina League last season, but at least he was pitching without pain. However, his delivery was unanimously side-arm, He was still favoring his shoulder.

Big Sid worked six innings, allowed only two runs, didn't walk anybody, struck out six and gave up seven hits. Only one was more than a single, and half of Durham's two runs off him were unearned.

Hudson, Harris Both Pleased

At the finish, Hudson was quite pleased with himself, especially his control. "I was getting some stuff on my pitches side-arm and I'm not going to rush my overhand delivery along. That will come later," he said. Manager Bucky Harris was quite pleased, too, with Hudson's showing.

The Durham lads got their last four runs off Rookie Dick Welteroth in the ninth inning. Bob Churchill, their left fielder, contributed three with a homer over the right field wall. With a single and triple off Hudson earlier in the game, Churchill in fact drove in five of Durham's six runs.

Eddie Stewart was the only Nat to hit the ball out of the park—he got a seventh-inning homer—but their 18-hit barrage included a pair of doubles by Sam Mele, also doubles by Bob Ortiz and Sherry Robertson, and triples by Robertson and Clyde Vollmer.

The Nats packed eight hits into their eight-run fourth inning, with Mele and Ortiz banging two-baggers and Robertson walloping his triple. The day's longest blows were the 400-foot triples of Vollmer and Mele against the grassy precipice in deep center field.

In the first four innings, the Nats were facing a former Baltimore lefthander, Lacey James, and he was no puzzle. In those four innings they rapped him for 14 of their 18 hits and 14 runs.

IN SHORT . . . Ray Scarborough today met with his brother, Dewey Scarborough, Durham businessman who very practically shortened his name during the years when he was signing checks as a State Finance Department employe . . . Today's victory lifted the Nats' exhibition game record to 13 wins, 11 defeats—six of their wins over minor league clubs. . . . Irv Noren sat it out today in deference to his swollen right hand which prevents him from gripping a bat. . . . When the X-rays showed no fracture, Noren whooped . . . . Al Kozar, who required only one stitch in his face after being struck in the mouth by a bad hop, is getting little sympathy from his pals who are asking "How'd it taste?" . . .

Lee, Thompson AAU Champs

Boston, April 12.—A pair of Washingtonians, Heavyweight Norvel Lee and Lightheavyweight Eldridge Thompson, fought their way to National A.A.U. Boxing Championships here tonight.

Lee, national Golden Gloves champion, and an alternate on the 1948 United States Olympic team, outpointed Stan Howlett of Madison, Ill., in the finals after outwrestling Louis Packer of Oakland, Calif., in a slow semifinals match that was roundly jeered by the 8508 crowd.

Thompson became the 175-pound titlist by winning a close decision over Jesse Manequalt of Baltimore in the finals. Earlier, in the semifinals, Eldridge won a split decision over Jim Craven of Atlanta.

Lee appeared to have the outstanding boxer award clinched until his two listless victories today. He had won a pair of smashing knockouts to advance to the semifinals. Instead, the prize went to Wes Echols, 160-pound champ from Atwater, Calif.

After 12 Rugged Seasons

Indians Release Keltner So He Can Make a Deal for Himself

Topeka, Kans., April 12 (AP).—Kenny Keltner said a sad "so long" to the Cleveland Indians today, after 12 rugged years as their regular third baseman.

Then, without apparent bitterness, Kenny packed his bags and headed for his home town Milwaukee, wondering what he'll do now. He's never been anything but a ball player.

Keltner got his unconditional release from Manager Lou Boudreau, his pal and teammate for 11 of those years.

Lou, announcing that Rookie Al Rosen will take over for Ken on opening day, called springing the news to Keltner "one of the toughest jobs I ever had."

Almost to the end, Boudreau was loyally insisting that the 33-year-old Keltner was his number one third baseman. Today he admitted he was playing him regularly in the hope that General Manager Hank Greenberg would be convinced.

This didn't work. After yesterday's game against the Giants in Wichita, Greenberg and Boudreau huddled. Keltner, they decided, must go.

"We could have sold him," explained Boudreau, "but he deserved better treatment than that after all the fine years he gave to Cleveland. Now he's free to make his own deal."

Terps Want Millikin, IBA Man, as Coach

Bud Millikin, former Oklahoma A. & M. All-American, has the inside track on the vacant University of Maryland basketball coaching job, The Washington Post learned last night.

Athletic Director Jim Tatum met with the Maryland athletic council last night and they decided on the 29-year-old Millikin as their first choice for the job left open two weeks ago by the resignation of Flucie Stewart.

Millikin is expected in College Park within the next two days for an interview. For the past two years, he has coached basketball at Newton, Iowa, High School, and this year, he guided his team to the finals of the state tournament.

Henry P. (Hank) Iba, Oklahoma Aggies athletic director, recommended Millikin to Tatum. Millikin played under Iba at the Stillwater, Okla., school and in his senior year, 1942. Bud was named on the Helms Foundation All-America team.

Before becoming coach at Newton, Millikin served a two-year hitch as basketball coach for a St. Joseph, Mo., school team.

Tatum said last night that Maryland has narrowed its lists of candidates from 65 down to two. The second choice is also a youngster in the coaching business, also former All-America, and also recommended by a veteran topflight coach.

Bauer Sisters Join Pro Ranks

NEW YORK, April 12 (AP).—Dave Bauer, father of golfing sisters Marlene and Alice Bauer of Midland, Tex., said today his daughters had turned professional.

They will play in their first tournament for cash at Pebble Beach, Calif., April 29-30, Bauer said. And on June 3-4, they go to Washington, D. C., for The Washington Post's National Celebrities Tournament.

Marlene, 16, was National Junior Girls Champion, and semifinalist in the National Women's Amateur Golf Tournament last year. She also was voted woman athlete of the year in the annual Associated Press poll, and was Golf Guide's woman golfer of the year. Her sister is 20.

The golfing fortunes of the girls will be handled by Fred Corcoran, tournament director for the Ladies Professional Golf Association.

Corcoran said the girls would play at Chicago May 6-7, at Cleveland May 13-14, and White Plains, N. Y., May 20-21. And later at Boston. In addition, they will play exhibitions and conduct clinics at schools and colleges.

Late in March, Bauer said it was uncertain whether his daughters would play in the Women's National Amateur this year. At that time, Golf World magazine reported the United States Golf Association was conducting an investigation into whether or not the girls had violated the amateur code.

Mrs. Babe Didrikson Zaharias and Patty Berg are among the other women professionals who will make the grand tour. Corcoran estimated the field at each place would number about 75, 25 of them being members of his touring troupe.

Hash Night Wins 'Graw Feature

Palatine Stable Has 3 Victors

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Havre de Grace, Md., April 12.—Hash Night, closing like the proverbial express train and setting a new record of 1:11 for the race, won the $7500 added Harford Handicap here today but it's a cinch that nobody connected with the Palatine Stable will eat hash this night.

Not only were the colors of Frank Rosen of Philadelphia flown to victory in the Harford, a fixture here since 1913, but two other horses brought them home on the midweek program which drew 8875 fans.

It was the second straight stake victory here for Palatine, Trainer J. H. Pierce and Jockey Johnny Gilbert, Quiz Show having carried the Blue and Gold Stripes to the wire in front of the Chesapeake Trial field last Saturday.

Wins by Two Lengths

Today Hash Night, a successful campaigner in Florida last winter, won by two lengths over W. P. Taylor's Magnet, first home in the Capitol Handicap and the favorite in a field whittled down to seven by scratches. The winner paid $11.80.

Third money went to Greentree Stable's Wine List, a length away from the place award.

The race was run in two sections. The first part found the longshots dominating the action and the stretch showed the better-played horses coming to the fore.

The Palatine Stable's first victory of the day came in the second race when Gilbert booted Sailing High, a 2-year-old colt, to the wire at $7.20. Those who coupled Sailing High with Mrs. W. C. Greer's Happy Count, the $39.60 winner of the first race, took a $188.80 daily double pay-off on the 7 and 3 combination.

The next appearance of the Palatine colors was in the fifth race. Delphy was installed the favorite and Apprentice John Dickey booted the 3-year-old home to the tune of a $5 mutuel.

A disqualification marked the seventh race but it did not involve H. G. Bedwell's Marie Egret, the $26.80 winner. B. F. Christmas' Saracen finished second but was placed third for carrying out W. P. Taylor's Carter Girl entering the stretch. Jocky Ray Shufelt made the objection against Charles Dorsey.

Shipped to Graw

New York, April 12 (AP).—Bill Winfrey, trainer of Alfred G. Vanderbilt's First Glance, said today the colt would be shipped to Havre de Grace, Md., for the $20,000-added Chesapeake Stakes Saturday.

Bill Bennings Says:

At Havre De Grace

Dear Folks:

Recent arrivals from Florida say that the State will have legalized gambling before next season—no afternoon spots but a la Reno at night. Alan Clarke plans to start King Mowlee in Saturday's Chesapeake Stakes. The Vanderbilt barn is sending down First Glance. Too bad that Bed o' Roses is out of the Derby. I had planned to do a lot of rooting. She might have gone had this been an ordinary year, but there are too many crack colts around. Jockey Ted Atkinson is commuting between here and New York. Per capita betting here is near the $65 mark which is encouraging to officials. Johnny Gilbert, who never has ridden a Derby winner, has several offers this year but may take Quiz Show, if the colt goes.

To Change Hunters' Limit

Ducks, Geese Have Their Census Too

By Ralph Murdock

THE U. S. FISH and Wildlife Service announces plans for its annual duck and geese census which may be used as a basis for changing hunters' bag limit regulations next fall.

Federal biologists are mapping a careful survey of breeding grounds over vast areas of Canada, Alaska and the Northern United States in an effort to find out what caused an estimated 25 percent drop in the bird population which migrated last fall.

Murdock

On the basis of their findings, they will decide whether to recommend a reduction in next fall's bird bag limit. Private wild life experts figure the winter bird population declined from 42 million birds in 1948-49 to less than 32 million in 1949-50.

These estimates are based on counts turned in by some 1300 sportsmen, State game agents and Fish and Wildlife Service employes. The Mexican and Caribbean counts were made by air while those in the Southern States were made by auto and on foot.

* * * * * * *

MANY OF THE sport fish types along the Atlantic Coast have declined in abundance in late years with the result that the catch per fishing effort has decreased. The decline in marlin, at Ocean City, and the blue fish in the Chesapeake, are well known examples, and there are several others. Recognizing this situation, Representative Christian A. Herter (R., Mass.) introduced a measure in Congress intended to provide for a comprehensive study of the existing conditions.

David H. Wallace, chairman of the Department of Tidewater Fisheries, appeared before the House Committee in support of this measure.

Major Virgil Johnson, who is willing to try any place with a casting rod, caught his first shad at Allen's Fresh. It also was his last—he caught only one.

Ed Davis reports that good catches of white perch and shad are still being taken at Piscataway Creek, which empties into the Potomac River near Fort Washington.

Week-End Suggestions

HERRING—Still plentiful in the Upper Patuxent River near Queen Anne's Bridge.

WHITE PERCH—Catches up to 125 reported in Upper Potomac River near Chain Bridge. Size of this species running small. Bloodworm is the prescription.

SHAD—Chain Bridge Area is out best bet at present. Casting rods with small shad spoons will do the trick. Upper Patuxent about 7 miles from Largo is out second choice. Should improve over the weekend.

Dudley Signs With Redskins

Bullet Bill Dudley finally became a Washington Redskin yesterday and Head Coach Herman Ball opined it's better late than never.

Dudley, secured in a trade with Detroit for Dan Sandifer, signed a one-year contract, his seventh in pro football.

The University of Virginia immortal who became the Cavaliers' first All-American in 1941 had hopes of going into business and getting out of football. But, like Sammy Baugh, he's now going to wait until "next year."

There's still a lot of good football in the 28-year-old 176-pounder. Last year at Detroit, with 81 points, he was third in league scoring.

Lust Host to 200 For Nats' Opener

Sidney B. Lust, local independent motion picture exhibitor, will play host to 200 outstanding Washington and Maryland personalities on Tuesday, April 18, at his eleventh annual opening-day baseball party.

A luncheon will be served at Mr. Lust's suite of offices in the new Kass Building prior to the game.

Truman Invites All Citizens To Attend Sesquicentennial

President Truman rolled out the city's welcome mat to all Americans yesterday in a proclamation inviting "citizens from every region of our country" to the Sesquicentennial celebration.

He invited them not only to come to Washington for this "event of deep national significance," but also to participate in "sesquicentennial observances."

Official opening of the commemoration of the 150th anniversary of the Federal Government's establishment will be held at 10 a. m. Saturday on the Capitol Plaza.

Text of the President's proclamation:

"Whereas the Congress of the United States has, by joint resolutions approved July 18, 1947, and May 31, 1949, provided for the commemoration of the 150th anniversary of the establishment of the permanent seat of the Federal Government in the District of Columbia in the year 1800; and

"Whereas this sesquicentennial anniversary of the Nation's Capital is an event of deep national significance to all Americans; and

"Whereas the National Capital Sesquicentennial Commission has, by direction of Congress, made plans to celebrate the progress of the United States since the founding of the Nation's Capital in the City of Washington; and

"Whereas during these 150 years the Government of the United States has, in the City of Washington, adopted the laws under which our Nation has grown in stature and dignity, has nurtured our basic concepts of individual and collective freedom, and has enabled our Nation to enact its historic role in man's eternal search for peace and dignity;

"Now, therefore I, Harry S. Truman, President of the United States of America, do hereby invite American citiens from every region of the country to come to their Nation's Capital and participate in the sesquicentennial observances. I also request the Governors of the respective States, Territories, and possessions of the United States to issue proclamations urging participation in these celebrations."

Jenkins Kayoes Sparring Partner In Tuneup for Jack

Former lightweight champion Lew Jenkins started his slugging a couple of days early as he kayoed one sparmate, and drove two others around the Liberty Athletic Club ring yesterday.

Jenkins stretched out Middleweight Joe Cunningham with a left hook and right cross in the first round of a scheduled 2-round workout, and then he rocked a couple of sparring partners named Lucky Boy and Ralph Brown.

St. John's Fetes Sports Press, Radio Men Today

Press, radio and television correspondents will be welcomed today by St. John's High School president Brother E. Clement and the Men of St. John's, represented at a buffet party at Airlie, site of the school's new home.

Brother F. Andrew, director of athletics, and football coach Joey Gallagher will preview the Johnnies' coming sports program. The guests will have the opportunity of inspecting the 10,000-seat stadium under construction.

Atlanta Open Next

Atlanta, April 12 (AP).—The money men of golf start swinging again for cash Thursday.

The touring pros, many of them still smarting under high scores made in the Masters Tournament at Augusta, will compete in the $10,000 Atlanta open at North Fulton Park. It ends Sunday.

L'Enfant's Memory Honored

The memory of Pierre Charles L'Enfant, author of Washington's city plan, was honored by the Columbia Historical Society at its fifty-sixth annual dinner last night in the Mayflower Hotel.

H. Paul Caemmerer, secretary of the Fine Arts Commission and author of a forthcoming biography of L'Enfant, gave the chief address.

Caemmerer, after describing L'Enfant's career in detail, spoke of the influence of his plan for the city.

It has been "a joy and inspiration," Caemmerer said, and "has had an influence also on other cities—Detroit, Buffalo, Indianapolis, Canberra, Australia; Medillin, Colombia, in South America; and quite recently Ottawa."

Prior to the introduction of Caemerer by toastmaster Leon Chatelain, jr., F. Regius Noel, president of the society, recalled that the organization was responsible for the removal of L'Enfant's body from a farm near Takoma Park to Arlington National Cemetery in 1909.

The society voted unanimously to indorse the efforts of the Georgetown Citizens Association to preserve the 'Old Stone House" at 3051 M st. nw., said to the oldest structure of its kind in the District.

Other features of the program included piano selections by Mme. Juliet Chautemps; songs by baritone Harry Angelico, accompanied by Bernice Angelico, and showing of a National Park Service film.

HAIR GETTING THIN? then GROOM IT WITH KREML

'TO AVOID THAT GREASY LOOK— MAKE HAIR LOOK MORE ABUNDANT

There's nothing better than Kreml to neatly groom thinning hair or sparse locks. Kreml doesn't look the least bit greasy, sticky or gooey. No dirt-catching film shows through on the scalp. Kreml always keeps hair and scalp looking and feeling so clean. AND SO VERY IMPORTANT—Kreml removes dandruff flakes (more noticeable with sparse hair); it lubricates a dry scalp, giving it a delightful tingle. Change to Kreml today.

Severance or Idle Pay Sought in Douglas Bill For Laid-Off Employes

Two developments yesterday on the growing controversy over annual and sick leave:

1. Senator Douglas revealed he is drafting a bill to give either severance pay or unemployment compensation to employes who are laid off, and,

2 The Senate Post Office and Civil Service Committee is preparing to hold hearings "before May 1" on Douglas' two bills to reduce annual and sick leave for most Government employes.

Douglas will tie in his severance-pay bill with his measure to limit employe leave from 12 to 20 days a year, based on years of service. He believes both bills should be passed at the same time. He estimates severance pay would cost from 40 to 50 millions annually. The Senator won't push his severance-pay plan if his alternative bill—20 days' annual leave for all employes—is enacted.

The legislator also said he would study the President's plan for unemployment compensation for Government people as a possible substitute for severance pay.

The plan for early hearings on the Douglas bills comes somewhat as a surprise. It's interpreted as meaning the drive to curtail leave has considerable Senate support. In fact, a committee source said the bills have "far more support than the 15 votes Senator Douglas received when he tried to get his 20-day bill tied to an appropriation bill several weeks ago."

At the time, several members said they voted against Douglas for two reasons: (1) no hearings were held on his plan, and (2) the rider would have been legislation on an appropriation bill.

Douglas said yesterday that he favored public hearings and a chance for employes and their representatives to be heard. He also said he wouldn't oppose amendments to either of his measures.

Incidentally, Foreign Service people on duty here would lose most from the Douglas plan. They are entitled to 60 days of leave annually no matter where they are stationed. His bill would require them to be out of the country for 10 months or longer in order to get the 60 days.

CAPITOL HILL: The Senate Civil Service Committee will meet today on (1) the bill to limit apprentice jobs in Government to veterans, and (2) H. R. 87, the bill to give postal World War II veteran credit toward promotions for time served in the armed forces. Both measures were referred to the full committee with reservations by a subcommittee.

NOTES: Stanley W. Oliver, president of the AFL's Federation of Technical Engineers, Architects and Draftsmen, yesterday accused the Civil Service Commission of using "inconclusive" cost of living data in cutting from 25 to 20 percent the bonus for Federal employes in Hawaii . . . The Byrd Economy Committee is making a study of the postal deficit and postal operations generally . . . The Senate Commerce Committee yesterday approved a bill to punish anyone who cribs on a Civil Aeronautics test up to a $1000 fine or a year in jail . . . Downgrading for more than 100 General Accounting employes will go into effect this weekend. Employes with up to 30 years' service will be demoted.

PENTAGON: The civilian health services of the military agencies are being reorganized. The surgeons general of the Army, Navy and Air Force will be made responsible for the health of civilian employes in their agencies. They will report to and be under the general direction of Dr. Richard L. Meiling, director of medical services under Defense Secretary Johnson.

After July 1 the Army surgeon general will handle the health program of all Defense civilians in this city. The Army's civilian medical division in the Pentagon will be merged with the Navy's nursing service. The merged unit will be called the Civilian Employe Health Service. Several scattered health units here will either be closed or brought into the new office. Secretary Johnson said his civilian health order was another step toward unification.

Civil Service yesterday reported that 5770 more Defense civilians lost their jobs during February.

County Jury Hears Trio On Gaming, Corruption

Prince Georges' Leaders Also Air Health Needs; Nebel Gives Testimony

The Prince Georges County grand jury yesterday listened to allegations of police corruption and gambling, which witnesses said were giving the county a black eye.

Two representatives of the County League of Women voters and the president of the county civic federation were subpenaed and testified for more than three hours before the grand jury.

They were Mrs. Reuben Bogdanoff, 6424 Knoll Brook dr., Hyattsville, league president; Mrs. Georgia Benjamin, College Park, chairman of the league's citizenship committee, and Walter F. Mulligan, Berwyn, federation president.

The three consigned a letter to Attorney General Hall Hammond last month calling for an investigation of the county. Hammond referred the letter to State's Attorney A. Gwynn Bowie. Under subpena all day, the three waited until after 5 p. m. before Bowie called them to testify.

Health Needs

Mrs. Benjamin is understood to have told the jury about the league's recommendations concerning the county's health needs.

Mulligan said he told the grand jury some steps would have to be taken to finance the education of "thousands of new children coming into the county every year."

He said he suggested a campaign to attract new industry because the county has two railroad systems, low electric power rates and is ideally located for business between two growing cities.

The grand jurors did not press him, Mulligan said, when he testified about the notoriety the county has received as a flourishing center of gambling.

Mrs. Bogdanoff said she told the grand jury the county was getting "a black eye" from newspaper stories about county gambling. She said potential residents were "ducking" Prince Georges County "because of this notoriety" and, as a result, the county was losing needed tax revenue.

Nebel Case

Before hearing from these county leaders, Bowie presented to the grand jury the case of Henry J. Nebel, ousted Bladensburg Chief of Police. Nebel had been accused of accepting bribes and failing to report liquor violations, but was dismissed by the town council March 30 for "failing to stay on duty during official tours of duty."

Nebel himself testified before the grand jury twice, but refused to state whether he had signed a waiver of immunity and refused to answer any questoins.

Other witnesses to testify in the Nebel case were: Robert M. Brooks, 24, 4900 block 49th st., Bladensburg, a liquor store employe, and Clifton L. Bartley, a Bladensburg policeman.

Both testified against Nebel during the five-hour council meeting March 30. Both said they repeated "pretty much the same" testimony before the grand jury yesterday.

Says Goodby to Pal and Leaves Hospital After 17 Months . . .

'SO LONG'—Mike Rector, carried to Casualty Hospital horribly burned 17 months ago, yesterday said goodbye to friends. He had a special handshake for a pal, Mike Hall, 2½, of Clinton, Md., who is recovering from burns

By Henry Rohland—The Washington Post

ON HIS WAY—Leaving the hospital with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Everett W. Rector, Mike steps along under the watchful eye of sister Rosalie, 12. He must return once a week to the hospital for a check-up and eventually there will be minor surgery. Only one outward sign remains, a slight forward hunch when he walks

Truscott, Number 2 Policeman, May Retire

Inspector, on Sick Leave Since March, Faces Official Board Today

Inspector Floyd A. Truscott, No. 2 man in the police department, will be considered today for retirement because of physical disability.

Absent from his post since March 4 on sick leave, Truscott did not personally request retirement. His appearance today before the Police and Firemen's Retiring and Relief Board was ordered by the Board of Police and Fire Surgeons after a physical examination Tuesday.

Truscott, 50, executive officer of the department since March, 1948, who made a reputation as an ace investigator, is eligible for a monthly retirement pension of $302.

If retired, Truscott said, he has no immediate plans other than to try to regain his health.

In announcing his ranking assistant superintendent would go before the retiring board, Maj. Robert J. Barrett, superintendent of police, gave no clew to his successor.

Truscott's police career—spanning nearly a quarter of a century—saw him in the role of a brilliant detective and capable executive.

In the 30's he figured in the investigation of practically every sensational District murder, among them the slaying of Beulah Limerick, Washington's "whoopee" girl.

Among the others were the so-called Wimbley-Crowder "American Tragedy" murder in 1931, and the Milsie Henry gang killing in 1932.

In 1934, he was highly praised by his superiors and the office of the United States Attorney for solving the mistaken identity murder of Allen Wilson, a newspaper route agent who was slain by local racketeers who had mistaken him for a rival gangster.

The Washington Post
INSPECTOR TRUSCOTT
May leave force

A native of Hilltop, Kans., Truscott accompanied his family to Washington at the age of 11.

He is a veteran of both World Wars. In the first war, he quit school at 17, added a year to his age when he enlisted, and served a year with the Army Ambulance Corps.

His police service began in May, 1925. His rise was rapid. Five years later he was a precinct detective, a year after that a detective sergeant.

In June, 1932, he was named to a special bank robbery squad and on July 1, 1935, was promoted to lieutenant in charge of the squad. He was promoted to captain in January, 1939, and given command of the Tenth Precinct.

A reserve officer, Truscott was called into active duty by the Navy in September, 1941. In more than four years in Naval Intelligence he advanced to the rank of full commander. He returned to the department on January 1, 1946.

He commanded the Second and Thirteenth Precincts until June, 1947, when he was promoted to rank of inspector and appointed chief of detectives. He moved up another notch in March, 1948, when he was named executive officer.

Truscott, who is married and the father of a 27-year-old son, lives at 4011 19th pl. ne.

Woman Hurt In Plunge Of 3 Floors

Spouse Reportedly Surprises Wife in Waitress' Apartment

A kimono-clad housewife, seeing her husband at the door, leaped from a third-floor window of a waitress' apartment on 14th st. nw. yesterday, according to police.

In the two-room apartment at 2523 14th st. nw at the time were the waitress and two men, police said.

Mrs. Virginia Madison, 29, of 4628 Livingston rd. se., was taken to Emergency Hospital, where attendants said she was in "fair" condition with "multiple fractures of the ankles and back."

Released after questioning at No. 13 Precinct Station were Mrs. Therera V. Hughes, 29, also known as Mrs. Theresa V. Stakeman, occupant of the apartment and described by police as a waitress, John D. Burgess, 28, of 624½ 4th st. ne., a hotel bell captain, and Miles J. Lea, 35, of 1213 N st. nw., a hotel messenger.

Mrs. Hughes and the two men, who police said were in the apartment when Mrs. Madison's husband appeared around 2 p. m., were released last night after being booked for investigation.

Mrs. Madison, according to police, was in the bathroom of the apartment when she jumped. Her husband, Donald E. Madison, 33, a dispatcher with Airport Transport, Inc., had knocked on the door 30 minutes before it was opened by one of the four inside, police said.

Investigating were Homicide Detectice Sergt. A. D. Clarke and Pvts. David Gould and Delbert Brill of No. 13 precinct, who gave reporters an account of the woman's plunge.

A row of medicine bottles on the bathroom window sill was undisturbed, leading them to believe Mrs. Madison jumped rather than fell, police said.

They quoted Madison as saying he saw Mrs. Hughes in a bedroom with Burgess. She wore slacks and a blouse, and Burgess wore trousers and a shirt, police said.

Asked for his version of what happened, Madison told a reporter that "what the police have told you is right."

Smiling Mike Rector, Cured Of Burns, Leaves Hospital

Smiling Michael Rector left Casualty Hospital for home yesterday, 17 months to the day that he was carried there fearfully burned.

The 5-year-old lad walked out almost blithely, with a youngster's unconcern for the adjustment he must necessarily face after so long being a star attraction.

He went home with his happy parents to start family living again with two older brothers, two older sisters and a third brother, Tommy, who was only a year old when Mike was burned from his ankles to his armpits.

Mike suffered severe burns to a closely estimated 70 percent of his body. His clothing, he said, was set afire with matches by playmates. The hospital team of "burn specialists," and his subsequent care, are credited largely with his recovery.

And Mike, a spunky youngster, won the city's heart and national attention in his fight. He won, too, showers of gifts and, his doctors admit, perhaps more favors than were good for him.

He left the hospital yesterday without restrictions save a once-a-week hospital checkup and eventual return for some minor surgery to correct muscle contractures. The groin muscle shortenings give him only a slight forward hunch, but cause no pain.

Now, he's a family member again, back home at 613 Elliott st. ne. There's also Rosalie, 12, and Marian, 10; Billy, 6, and Eddie, 8, and then there's Tommy.

Winchell Blows in at Post, Spills Newsgetting Methods

By Bill Brinkley
Post Reporter

Flash! Mr. and Mrs. North and South Washington and All the Boats at the Maine Avenue Wharves:

Walter Winchell came to town yesterday and told where he got most of his news.

"I get it," rasped Winchell, "from an awful lot of people who promised somebody else they'd keep it a secret. Italicize and capitalize, Mr. Reporter, the word 'awful'."

The most fabulous newsnooper of his time revealed that nearly all his celebrated infanticipating, baby-bound, storked items come from the people themselves.

Winchell confided he hadn't been "so hopped up" about anything in memory as his return to Washington for the first time in years. His column starts Sunday in The Washington Post.

While President Truman welcomed President Gonzalez of Chile, Winchell watched from the city room of The Washington Post.

Looking fit as a Florida orange (he's just from the South) Winchell is a small and dapper man in blue suit and tie, with the famous Winchell hat cocked at the Winchell angle.

Another way he gets news is doing little favors for people.

"Cast your bread upon the waters," said Winchell, "and maybe you get angel cake in return."

He has traveled from as far down as you can get to as far up, we reckon, as you can go financially in what is for some quaint reason called "the newspaper game."

While the voices of Truman and the Chilean president rolled up from below over the loud-speakers, he talked above this.

He started out on "nothing-a-week" for the experience of covering a blizzard for a Chicago paper.

Last year, he revealed, talking about his income in terms of "we:"

"Last year we made $826,000."

This reportorial we figured that in the two hours we interviewed him Winchell made around the sum we make in a year. The newspaper game!

But he swore he cleared only about $40,000 a year after taxes, including $400,000 to Uncle Sugar.

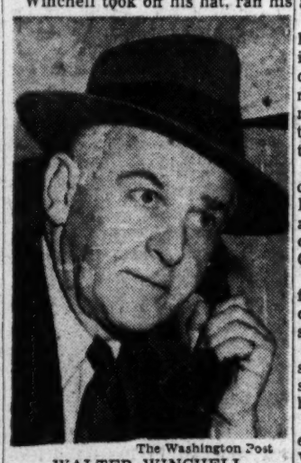
He has contributed a good hunk of earnings such as from magazine pieces, to the cancer fund in memory of his great friend Damon Runyon.

And when invited yesterday to take part in The Washington Post National Celebrities Golf Tournament June 3 and 4, proceeds of which go to aid underprivileged children, Winchell immediately accepted.

Winchell, who took up golf just six months ago, announced: "I hereby challenge Arthur Godfrey to a match the tournament.

"How do you feel about Washington?"

Winchell took off his hat, ran his hand over his white hair, recocked his hat.



The Washington Post
WALTER WINCHELL
. . . 'I love Washington'

"Mr. Reporter, this is the Capital of the World. I love Washington.

"The only thing I don't love about Washington is the way they roll up the walks at, what is it—midnight or 1 oclock?"

The Winchell schedule is different: Up at 4 p. m., really to work around midnight, to bed at 6 a. m. "People talk more freely, I learned early, around the nocturnal table."

The gravel voice kept going like a machine gun on a perpetual feed of clips.

"Once at a dinner I was talking to someone, and George Jean Nathan was talking to someone else right behind me."

Winchell said he heard Nathan say:

"I don't know how Winchell gets so much news, he never listens."

"Winchell," rasped Winchell, "not only listens. Winchell listens with both ears."

The hawk eyes gleamed, and the two ears seemed like quivering megaphones. Winchell was back in Washington.

Arnold Union Charges Fraud By Company

Fare Hike Obtained Through Perjury, Petition Tells ICC

Immediate suspension of the Arnold bus line's 5-cent fare boost, on the charge that the company had committed both fraud and perjury, was urged on the Interstate Commerce Commission yesterday by the transit firm's AFL employes.

The petition was filed by Bernard Cushman, attorney for Division 1079, Amalgamated Association of Street, Electric Railway, and Motor Coach Employes of America, AFL.

The union asked for a rehearing on the fare increase—granted the line only last Saturday by a 2-1 vote of an ICC panel—and reconsideration by the entire 11-man commission.

Principal charge of the union is that the Arnold Line—Washington, Virginia, and Maryland Coach Co.—which carries around 50,000 passengers daily in Washington and nearby Virginia—won its fare hike with the argument that it needed additional revenue to pay its AFL union employes an arbitration award.

The award amounted to 17 cents an hour and was retroactive to May.

Now, however, the company is only willing to pay an extra 10 cents an hour in pay, without retroactivity, the union contends. Thereby, the company has not only committed a fraud in getting a fare hike, but perjury as well, according to the union.

The union asked that the 5-cent hike be suspended while new hearings are held, and that if the evidence provides the company committed a "deliberate fraud" the matter should be turned over to the prosecuting authorities "under the perjury provisions of the law."

Meanwhile, a 5-cent cash increase on all interstate Arnold lines fares went into effect at 12:01 a. m. yesterday, following approval of the fare boost by the State Corporation Commission Monday.

The special rate on school bus fares also rose, from 5 cents to a dime per trip, under the SCC decision.

A 5-cent cash increase on interstate fares, granted by the Interstate Commerce Commission, has been in effect since last Saturday.

The Arnold line is presently operated by the Commonwealth of Virginia, under a State law designed to prevent strikes against public utility services. The State took over last fall.

F St. Ride

D. C.'s Word On 'Revere' Due Today

Corporation Counsel Vernon E. West will advise the District Commissioners today on the legality of permitting a modern Paul Revere to ride on F st. in a home-rule demonstration.

The Central Suffrage Conference wants Paul's horse to bear a sign reading: "Taxation Without Representation Is Still Tyranny."

But Superintendent of Police Robert J. Barrett Tuesday called attention to a District regulation which prohibits the carrying of advertising signs or banners on public space.

West said last night: "The question was raised some time ago whether this regulation applies to the advertising posters carried on streetcars. The Commissioners took the matter under advisement, but I don't recall any announcement regarding their decision."

Edward D. Merrill, president of Capital Transit, acknowledged that the issue had been raised. "As far as I remember," he said, "nothing came of it."

Citizens Assail Unsegregated Use of Pools

The North Washington Council of Citizens Associations last night went on record as being opposed to opening of swimming pools on a non-segregated basis.

The organization voted to notify Representative Thomas G. Abernathy (D., Miss.), chairman of a House District subcommittee, of the council's position, and to ask that the citizens associations be notified of the next hearing.

In other action, the council bitterly condemned transfer of Central High School from white to Negro use, declaring it was contrary to the Strayer report and gave Negroes two indoor swimming pools whereas whites had none.

The council also deplored reduction of the Federal appropriation for the Hill-Burton hospital act and asked that the 50 percent, 75-million-dollar cut be restored.

Walter M. Bird, vice chairman, presided at the meeting in the Sixth Precinct police station.

Bids to Be Asked For New School at Howard University

The Federal Security Administration is expected to advertise for bids next month for a new engineering school for Howard University.

Construction of the school, estimated to cost about two million dollars, will be the first step in an 11-million-dollar construction program at the local university, for which Congressional funds already have been appropriated.

Other buildings, expected to get under way within two years, will be a $2,242,000 dental building, a $1,950,000 law school, a $2,732,000 auditorium and fine-arts building, and a $1,625,000 administration building.

Police Seeking Hit-Run Car Which Struck D. C. Pedestrian

A hit-and-run car believed to have been occupied by three soldiers was sought by police yesterday.

The car struck a pedestrian, Edward L. Carter, 39, of 512 Seward sq. se., at 12:30 a. m. in the 300 block of 7th st. sw. Carter, who suffered a fractured left leg, was reported in good condition at Emergency Hospital.

Police said the car, a 1936 Ford coupe, was going south on 7th st.

A streetcar operated by Walter E. Myers, 51, of 6052 N 20th st., Arlington, Va., and an auto driven by Richard E. Ward, 22, of 1729 13th st. se., collided yesterday at 5:45 a. m. at 7th and D sts. nw. The auto was turned on its side.

Ward and a passenger in his car, Kathleen Costello, 36, of 2421 Pennsylvania ave. nw., were treated for minor injuries at Emergency Hospital.

There were no accidents but traffic was snarled on the 14th St. Highway Bridge yesterday morning. The combination of construction work on the District side and a stalled truck on the Virginia approach obstructed traffic from 6 to 9 a. m.

So many motorists attempted to escape the jam by using the Memorial Bridge that another tieup resulted there.

Traffic Killed Seven In D. C. During March

Seven persons were killed and 456 injured in 1150 traffic accidents in the District last month, police reported yesterday.

This was contrasted with the six persons killed and 435 injured in 957 accidents during March of 1949.

The first three months of this year showed 3254 accidents, 369 more than for the first three months of 1949.

Municipal Parking Lots Seen As Aid to Arlington Problem

Municipally-run parking lots are the best answer to the parking problem in crowded Arlington business areas, a special committee set up by the Arlington County Board has recommended.

The lots could be financed partly by low parking charges, and partly by a special tax of 15 cents per $100 assessed value on commercial property within particular business districts, the committee said.

Report of the 12-man group, headed by Thomas W. Phillips and Ray L. Miller, was released yesterday by Arlington County Manager A. T. Lundberg.

The committee noted that the 1950 Virginia General Assembly cleared the way for such county-run facilities, with a law permitting assessment of Arlington businesses by special districts.

The committee, established last December gave special study to the congested Clarendon business center, where it said parking space for 1245 more cars could be provided via municipal lots.

Cost of setting up the lots, which would double existing parking space in Clarendon according to one committee member, could be covered by a $1,750,000 self-liquidating bond issue, the committee report said.

Annual operating expenses, including debt retirement would be about $150,800, according to the report. A $112,050 portion of this could be covered by a parking charge of 15 cents for the first two hours, plus 5 cents for each additional hour. Remaining $48,769 share of the annual expenses would be provided by the special business tax.

Hospital Discharges Former Senator White

Former Senator Wallace H. White (R., Me.) was released yesterday from George Washington University Hospital where he had been under treatment for a heart attack.

White was in the same hospital for several weeks last year after a heart attack, and returned April 1 after what his physician, Dr. Paul F. Dickens, described as a "slight attack." He will convalesce at his home here.

Leukemia Victim Flown Here . . .

FAMILY FLIGHT—The whole Mikesell family came along when Mrs. Mary Mikesell, ill with leukemia, was ordered to Bethesda Medical Center for treatment. The Mikesells flew in Monday night from San Juan, Puerto Rico, where Navy musician Richard Mikesell has been stationed. Rear Admiral Daniel Barbey, Caribbean Sea Frontier Commander, smoothed the way so the family could come together. Richard, 5, and Mary, 2, are shown with their parents just before they left San Juan Monday. Mikesell will go to duty at the Navy School of Music here, while his wife undergoes treatment at Bethesda

Mrs. Eva Jack Dies; Lived in Takoma Park

Mrs. Eva May Jack, 61, of 806 Flower ave., Takoma Park, Md., died of cancer yesterday at Washington Sanitarium. She had been hospitalized for over seven months.

Funeral services will be held at St. Stephen and the Incarnation Church, 16th and Newton sts. nw., at 10 a. m., Friday.

Colby Funeral Is Arranged For Saturday

Bemus Point, N. Y., April 12 (AP). Funeral services will be held here Saturday for Bainbridge Colby, Secretary of State in the Woodrow Wilson administration, who died last night. Burial will follow in Bemus Point Cemetery.

Mr. Colby

Mr. Colby, a political individualist throughout his career, suffered a heart attack two weeks ago. He was 80.

His wife, Mrs. Anne Ahlstrom Colby, was with him when he died at his home here.

While Secretary of State, Mr. Colby wrote an historical note refusing recognition to Russia. Mr. Colby never chanaged his opinion. Until recently, he gave lectures against communism.

Mr. Colby's affiliations with political parties were many and various. As Secretary of State from March 22, 1920, to March 4, 1921, he held the highest Cabinet post under a Democratic president.

But he had been a Republican and in 1902, was elected to the New York Legislature on the GOP ticket. In 1912, Mr. Colby joined Bull Moose bolters in nominating Theodore Roosevelt for President and in helping form the Progressive Party.

Four years later, however, he broke with Roosevelt and campaigned with Wilson.

He made a Nation-wide speaking tour in support of Franklin D. Roosevelt in 1932 but within a year was criticizing the New Deal Administration.

In 1936, he supported the unsuccessful Republican Presidential nominee, Gov. Alfred M. Landon of Kansas.

Mr. Colby was born in St. Louis, was graduated from Williams College in 1890 and from Columbia University School of Law in 1892.

Mr. Colby was a former trustee of Colby College, Waterville, Me. The college was named for Gardiner Colby, to whose descendants Bainbridge Colby was distantly related.

He is survived by his widow, and two daughters, Mrs. Kate Colby Delafield and Mrs. Francis Rogers, both of New York City.

James Duke Funeral Rites Slated Today

Requiem mass will be said for James Edward Duke, 82, retired Norfolk lumber man and member of an old Virginia family, at 10 a. m. today at St. Matthew's Cathedral, 1725 Rhode Island ave. nw. The remains will be entombed in a mausoleum at Cedar Hill Cemetery.

Mr. Duke died at Georgetown University Hospital Monday night after an illness of six months. A Washington resident since his retirement 40 years ago, he lived at the Wardman Park Hotel since 1929.

He was born in Manchester, Va., the son of Cordelia Humphries and James Edward Duke, a tobacco planter. He was educated at King's Mountain, N. C. He was a member of the Southern Society and the Virginia State Society.

Survivors include his widow, Mrs. Mary Loughran Duke, and four sons, Col. James Edward Duke, jr., Austin, Tex.; Comdr. Charles L. Duke and John L. Duke, both of San Francisco, Calif., and Daniel F. Duke, Atlanta, Ga. Eight grandchildren and three great grandchildren also survive.

McGinnis, Legion PRO, Suffers Heart Attack

Edward F. McGinnis, national publicity director of the American Legion and former Senate sergeant at arms, was in serious condition in Chicago last night after suffering a heart attack.

He was stricken at the Ambassador East Hotel there Tuesday and admitted to Passavant Hospital. A native of Chicago, he and his wife went to Chicago several days ago to make arrangements for a Legion conference. He was sergeant at arms of the Senate during the Eightieth Congress.

Time to Study Jobless Pay Bills Granted

Senator Matthew M. Neely (D., W. Va.) yesterday granted District employer groups three more weeks to study his bill to boost D. C. unemployment benefits.

At the opening hearing Tuesday before the Senate District Committee, the Washington Board of Trade and other business spokesmen demanded at least 60 days to consider the measure's "far-reaching ramifications" before committing themselves.

A two months' delay, Neely, the Committee chairman, answered yesterday, would virtually kill any chance of the bill passing at this session of Congress.

Neely suggested a two-week "study" period, but two other committee members—Senators Edward L. Leahy (D., R. I.) and Harry Darby (R., Kan.)—plugged for three weeks. Neely conceded, and announced hearings would resume at 10 a. m. May 3.

The measure would raise maximum jobless benefits from $20 for 20 weeks to $33 for 26 weeks. It also aims to close loopholes in the present law to bar unqualified idle workers from drawing unemployment compensation.

Neely introduced the bill on March 17 at request of District AFL officials.

Four witnesses were heard yesterday. Horace Walker, representing the District Pharmaceutical Association, argued the proposed payment boost would force drug stores to pay more for clerks.

Mrs. Gertrude Evans, for the Progressive Party of Washington, contended the bill should be amended to make strikers eligible to draw unemployment benefits.

Francis G. Heigle of the Central Businessmen's Association, asked Neely for a 30-day delay so his group might analyze questionnaires sent to 1000 employers. Herbert Pillen, for the Graphic Arts Association, also asked delay.

Hearings on two other pending District labor bills will be held directly after the jobless pay measure is disposed of. They would require employers to pay workers at least twice a month in cash or check and extend the minimum wage law to men here.

3 One-Way Streets to Go Back to Normal

Three streets near Dupont Circle that have been used for two years as one way detours will revert to normal usage in about two weeks when the underpass is opened.

George E. Keneipp, Director of Vehicles and Traffic, said yesterday these changes will be made:

Twenty-first st. between Massachusetts and Florida aves., now one way for southbound traffic, will become one way north. The Commissioners Tuesday made 20th st. one way south from Connecticut to Massachusetts aves. because the underpass ramp blocks northbound traffic at Connecticut ave.

Eighteenth st. between N and S sts., now oneway north, will be opened to two-way traffic.

N st., now one way east from 21st st. to Scott Circle, will remain one way east from 18th st. to Scott Circle. From Connecticut ave. to 22d st. it will become one way for westbound traffic.

Last link in the surface roadway system at Dupont Circle was opened to traffic yesterday morning. Highway Director J. N. Robertson said the underpass should be completed April 25, weather permitting.

Mrs. Rohrman, Broker, Dies

Mrs. Marie E. Rohrman, 56, office secretary at Auchincloss, Parker & Redpath, stock brokers, died Tuesday in George Washington University Hospital. She had been ill four months.

Mrs. Rohrman, who lived at 4515 Iowa ave. nw., was the wife of William H. Rohrman, Agriculture Department section chief. A licensed broker, Mrs. Rohrman had been with the brokerage firm, located at 729 15th st. nw., for the past 12 years.

She was a lifelong resident of Washington and attended the old Business High School. She worked formerly for the American Security & Trust Co. She had been associated with various investment brokers, including G.M.P. Murphy and Cox here.

Mrs. Rohrman had taught Sunday school and was active in the Ladies Aid Society of the First Evangelical and Reform Church, 13th and Monroe sts. nw. She was a member of the Mount Pleasant Chapter, Order of the Eastern Star.

Besides her husband, she is survived by a brother, Carl F. Ehninger, of Cleveland, and a sister, Mrs. Elsie E. Loehl, 9028 Fairview rd., Silver Spring.

Funeral services will be at 2 p. m. today in the Deal funeral home, 4812 Georgia ave. nw. Burial will be in Rock Creek Cemetery.

Woman's Burns Treated After Bed Catches Fire

Mrs. Mary Lamb, 26, of 3813 13th st. nw., was treated for first degree burns to her back after a fire destroyed the bed and mattress in her bedroom last night.

Neighbors, attracted by Mrs. Lamb's screams, called firemen who had the fire under control in a few minutes. Firemen said Mrs. Lamb had been smoking in bed. She was treated by an Emergency Hospital ambulance doctor.

Memorial Rites

Lansburgh's Stood Still A Moment

By Dorothea Andrews
Post Reporter

A floor walker, white carnation in buttonhole, was walking along the main aisle in Lansburgh's Department store.

Shoppers, poked at gloves, fingered books pyramided on a display shelf.

Mark Lansburgh, vice president and secretary of the firm, was talking to the Rev. Seth Brooks at the information booth. The signal bells monotoned on.

On the fourth floor, behind a door marked store manager, homicide men weary with nearly a week of asking questions, probing into the brutal murders of two Lansburgh guards, were fingering flashlights, talking to store detectives . . . "Police pressed their hunt for the slayer . . ."

"Attention Please . . ."

The clock hands crept to 11. The store bells rang.

"Attention please, attention please" . . . and the memorial services for John C. Carpenter, 66, and Oliver Hess, 56, who were stabbed to death in the first moments of Good Friday, were underway.

"The Lord is my shepherd, I shall not want," said the Rev. Mr. Brooks.

The store was quiet. The few men on the floor took off their hats. Elevators were stopped at different floors.

"We know not what a day will bring forth," the Universalist minister intoned . . . "Make us to know thou art the God and father of all men."

Girl Tugs at Hand

A little girl in a blue velvet coat tugged questionings at her mother's hand, was shushed into quiet.

"We give thee praise for all lives good and true; for all who have been faithful even unto death and have not failed in the discharge of their duty even though that duty led to pain, trial and death."

A white haired clerk at the hosiery counter sniffled.

. . . "Receive their souls that they may be at peace. Bless and comfort their families in the hour of glory . . ."

Taps Sound

Under the vaulted store ceilings, the sound of taps.

The store bells rang again. People started moving about, a little self consciously.

A bundle-laden woman bustled cheerfully through the 8th st. store door, walked purposely to the toiletries counter. Store porters started moving their hand trucks again, bringing new merchandise to the shelves.

The memorial service was over.

Police Still Stymied In Watchmen Slayings

Police reported no progress yesterday in their investigation of the knife murders last Friday of two night watchmen in the Lansburgh Department Store.

Lieut. Richard Felber, acting head of the homicide squad, who is in charge of the investigation, said eight more former employes of Lansburgh's were questioned yesterday at headquarters but were released after it was determined they could shed no light on the savage killings.

Police are confronted with the gigantic task of questioning 1500 Lansburgh employes as well as 500 other persons who have worked for the store in the past.

The murders are being investigated around the clock by a force of more than 30 detectives.

Victims of the store murders were Oliver R. Hess, 56, of 1324 Massachusetts ave. nw., and John C. Carpenter, 66, of 506 G st. sw.

Health Section Asks Chest Aid For 11 Agencies

The Health Section of United Community Services yesterday recommended that 11 Washington organizations be accepted for Community Chest support for 1951.

The recommendations will be given to the UCS board of trustees, which must finally pass on the applications.

Approved by health section members were the Washington Committee for Education on Alcoholism, Instructive Visiting Nurse Society, Washington Institute of Mental Hygiene, D. C. Society for the Prevention of Blindness, Washington Hearing Society, Social Hygiene Society;

Animal Rescue League Opposed

Washington Animal Rescue League, Children's Country Home, Christ Child Convalescent Farm, Florence Crittenton Home and Washington Housing Association.

Only dissenting votes were against the Washington Animal Rescue League.

Dr. Seruch Kimble, a practicing physician and a member-at-large of the Health Section, asked whether the league would consider providing animals for research in medical schools as a "contribution to our community."

He said he wondered how much "conclusive evidence" there is that the organization "would fall apart" if the animals were used in medical research.

Bequests Tied to Policy

Mrs. C. Augustus Simpson, speaking for the league, said it had a "definite policy to take no part in vivisection, one way or another." She said there had been a substantial reaction of animal lovers against vivisection, however, and that the league would not receive many animals if it were known to be turning them over for experimentation.

Mrs. Simpson added that the league has received a number of bequests and gifts from persons who assumed its existing policy would be continued.

The league's application was approved by an 11-to-5 vote.

Kane Is Chosen To Spur Boy's Camp Drive

Directors of the Merrick Boys Camp opened the 1950 appeal for funds last night with the selection of Al Philip Kane, Washington attorney, as director of the campaign.

Kane

Funds are being sought to send 600 area boys to the Merrick Camp free of charge this summer. The camp is located at Maryland Point, Charles County, Md.

Raymond A. DuFour, president of the camp, announced the appointment of Kane at the annual spring dinner meeting of more than 100 camp directors at the Columbia Country Club.

Archbishop Patrick A. O'Boyle, of Washington, guest of honor at the dinner, congratulated the directors for "their magnificent work" for underprivileged boys. A number of parish priests and their assistants who are planning special collections for the camp funds, also were guests.

A native Washingtonian, Kane was graduated from Gonzaga High School and Georgetown University and lives at 4807 30th st. nw. He is president of the Fathers' Club of Gonzaga High, a former vice president of the D. C. Bar Association, and has been on the faculty of the Georgetown Law School since 1934.

Trumans Give Dinner for Chile's Chief

By Marie McNair

THE President of Chile and Senora de Gonzalez, sampling Washington hospitality for the first time, surely must have found it good.

Thousands cheered as the presidential couple were driven down Pennsylvania avenue's broad highway to Blair House. Last night, rested after the plane trip from Chile and the welcoming ceremonies by Capital dignitaries, President Gonzalez and his charming senora were honor guests at a state dinner at the Carlton Hotel given by President and Mrs. Truman, their hosts during their three-day stay in Washington.

The 66 guests were seated around a horseshoe table, the U shaped center filled with tubs of pink hydrangeas ringing a bubbling fountain and feathery ferns. The table had centerpieces of pink carnations, pink roses and pink and white snapdragon, with blue delphinium and Baker fern. Overhead the Marine Band stringed orchestra in scarlet tunics played on the balcony.

Hosts and guests of honor sat together, the two Presidents side by side, with Senora de Gonzalez on the President's right and the Chilean Chief Executive on Mrs. Truman's right.

Mrs. Truman Wears Gray and Cherry Red

THERE was infinite variety in color and materials of the ladies' gowns.

Mrs. Truman wore gray lace with a cherry red velvet sash and bow tied at the side. Senora de Gonzalez had chosen a chiffon gown in one of the new shades which might have been pale gray or green or even oyster white according to the light, and Margaret Truman's frock of white chiffon was ballet length and sprinkled with rhinestones.

Senora de Nieto del Rio, wife of the Chilean Ambassador, just back from Paris, wore a new gown of black velvet fitted to mid-calf with a full flounce of black net. A tiny bolero jacket covered the low decolletage.

Wine velvet, so deep in shade that it might have been black, was worn by Senora de Campos, daughter of the honor guests. One shoulder was uncovered and a spray of gardenias was pinned to the diagonal neckline at the opposite side. Her dark hair is cut in an almost shoulder length bob.

Net was worn by Mrs. Snyder, wife of the Secretary of the Treasury; Mrs. Dudley Brown, Secretary of State Dean Acheson's daughter; and Mrs. James Webb, wife of the Undersecretary of State. Mrs. Snyder's gown of cocoa brown, was full skirted and sown with pleated rosettes. Mrs. Webb was in bouffant watermelon pink and Mrs. Brown wore the palest of beige combined with a bodice of gold and beige brocade.

Gray haired Senora de Walker, whose husband is Minister of Foreign affairs of Chile, was handsome in a sweeping gown of black lace. And looking as pretty as the proverbial pink was Mrs. Charles Brannan in turquoise satin and tulle. Mrs. Louis Johnson wore filmy white chiffon, simply made with cap sleeves; Mrs. Maurice Tobin was in navy blue lace with a girdle and streamers of Nile green satin.

President and Mrs. Truman's State dinner last evening at the Carlton Hotel in honor of Chile's President, Gabriel Gonzalez Videla and Senora de Gonzalez, was one of the dressiest parties of the season. Here's the Chief of Protocol, Stanley Woodward, and Mrs. Woodward, whose gown of pale green satin was trimmed in black lace

Treasury Secretary On Cabinet List

THE Secretary of the Treasury, John W. Snyder, and Mrs. Snyder were in the gathering, as were the Secretary of Defense, Louis Johnson, and Mrs. Johnson. Other Cabinet members present were the Attorney General and Mrs. J. Howard McGrath, the Postmaster General and Mrs. Jesse Donaldson, the Secretary of the Interior and Mrs. Oscar Chapman, the Secretary of Agriculture and Mrs. Charles Brannan, the Secretary of Labor and Mrs. Maurice J. Tobin. Only member missing from the Cabinet line-up was the Secretary of Commerce, Charles Sawyer, who is in Minneapolis to make a speech, and Mrs. Sawyer, still vacationing in Palm Beach.

Chief Justice Fred Vinson was in the company without Mrs. Vinson, now in Kentucky with her mother, Mrs. Robert Dixon, who is ill; the Chilean Ambassador and Senora de Nieto del Rio, and the Secretary of State, Dean Acheson was accompanied by his daughter, Mrs. Dudley Brown, in the absence of Mrs. Acheson, who is in New York.

Senator Tom Connally, chairman of the Senate's Foreign Relations Committee, was a guest with Mrs. Connally. Senator Alexander Wiley, of the same committee, brought his daughter, Mrs. Philip D. Bradley. The chairman of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, Representative John Kee and Mrs. Kee, and Representative Charles Eaton, Republican from New Jersey on the Foreign Affairs Committee, were also in the group.

Then—Undersecretary of State and Mrs. James E. Webb, Fleet Admiral William D. Leahy, Presidential Assistant John Steelman and Mrs. Steelman, Presidential Secretary and Mrs. Charles G. Ross, Alberto Lleras, Secretary General of the Pan American Union, and Senora de Lleras, Assistant Secretary of State and Mrs. Edward G. Miller, jr., Chief of Protocol and Mrs. Stanley Woodward.

Mrs. Perle Mesta, our Minister to Luxembourg, was in the gathering and others were the President's Military Aide, Maj. Gen. Harry Vaughan and Mrs. Vaughan; Rear Admiral Walter G. Schindler, who has been assigned as U. S. Aide to President Gonzalez, and Mrs. Schindler.

600 DAR Members Honor Their Candidate

By Nicha Souré

IN AN atmosphere of pre-Congress excitement, 800 Daughters of the American Revolution gathered at the DAR chapter house yesterday afternoon to honor Mrs. James B. Patton, candidate for president general of the DAR.

To the party came many Daughters who had arrived in Washington early for the DAR fifty-ninth Continental Congress being held in Constitution Hall April 17 through April 21. State regents, local DAR members, national officers, junior DAR members and their guests came to greet the candidate for president general.

Mrs. William Alfred Disque, wearing a blue chiffon and lace Dinner gown, was hostess at the reception.

In the receiving line with Mrs. Patton, who was gowned in flowered chiffon, and Mrs. Disque were Mrs. John Morrison, Mrs. Loren E. Rex, Mrs. Roland M. James, Mrs. Charles H. Danforth and Mrs. John Morrison Kerr, who is the District's contribution to the Patton ticket. Mrs. Kerr is candidate for the office of treasurer general.

Mrs. Roscoe C. O'Byrne, the president general of the DAR, dropped in to the reception. After a few words to friends in the receiving line, she chatted with other DAR members over tiny green and white cakes and coffee.

Miss Mary Stuart Price, chairman of the pourers, was assisted by Miss Constance Fryer, Miss Cynthia Hill, Mrs. Lee Bryte, Mrs. Jean Gabriel and Mrs. Arthur C. Smith.

Presiding at the tea table were Mrs. Allen I. Price, Mrs. George Scott, Mrs. Theodore Pierson, Mrs. Burnet Olmsted and Mrs. George Stansfield.

Bob Burchette—The Washington Post

THIS DAR trio enjoys a friendly chat at the reception yesterday in the DAR Chapter House. Left to right, Mrs. John Morrison Kerr, candidate for treasurer general on Mrs. James B. Patton's ticket; Mrs. Patton, candidate for president general of the DAR, and Mrs. William Alfred Disque, who was hostess at yesterday's reception. The DAR Fifty-Ninth Continental Congress opens here Monday

THE DAUGHTERS of the American Colonists yesterday passed a vote of commendation to "those within and without Congress who are striving to rid our Government offices of persons opposing our form of government."

In closing sessions of their two-day convention at the Mayflower Hotel, the Daughters also went on record as opposed to "any form of world government or subsidiary schemes," "Government - controlled economy," and Federal aid to education.

In addition, the society passed a resolution to "reaffirm their faith in the service of private practice of the medical profession," on the grounds that Government control of medical care would tend to curtail private research.

BRIG. GEN. Robert. E. L. Eaton, deputy director of the office of legislative liaison, Office of the Secretary of Defense, was guest speaker at the National Society of Daughters of Founders and Patriots of America last night.

General Eaton spoke at the opening night dinner meeting of the fifty-second general court of the organization at the Shoreham Hotel.

At the morning session today reports of national officers will be heard, and nominations made for the three national councilors to be elected. A memorial service at noon will be followed by the installation of the new national councilors and new presidents and vice presidents of the State chapters.

Mrs. Parker Will Speak on Personality, Success

Mrs. Agnes McCall Parker, director of the Parker School of Personality, will speak on "Personality and the Power to Succeed" at a luncheon meeting of Columbian Women, alumnae organization of the George Washington University, on Saturday at 12:30 p. m. at the Woman's National Democratic Club.

Press Club to Hold Reception For Trumans, Award Winners

A reception for President and Mrs. Truman, six Achievement Award winners and seven outstanding newspaper and radio women from throughout the country will precede the Women's National Press Club's annual dinner Saturday night. The Federal Room of the Hotel Statler will be the scene of the 6 p. m. reception.

A number of other parties have been planned for out-of-town visitors for the dinner. Mr. and Mrs. Peter Maxwell Miller, jr., will give a cocktail party immediately preceding it at the Statler in honor of Mrs. Joseph M. Patterson of the New York Daily News, and her son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. James Patterson of New York. On Friday evening Mr. and Mrs. Earl Gammons are entertaining at cocktails in honor of Dr. Frank Stanton, president of Columbia Broadcasting Co., and Mrs. Stanton, Joseph Ream, CBS vice president, and Mrs. Ream.

Chief Justice and Mrs. Fred Vinson will be among those attending Saturday night's dinner and stunt party. Other notables who have accepted invitations include the Norwegian Ambassador and Mme. Munthe de Morgenstierne, the British Ambassador and Lady Franks, the French Ambassador and Madame Bonnet, the Greek Ambassador and Madame Dendramis, the Netherlands Ambassador and Madame van Kleffens, the Ambassador from New Zealand and Mrs. Berendsen and the United States Minister to Luxembourg, Mrs. Perle Mesta.

This year's Achievement Award winners, to be honored by the dinner, include Actress Olivia de Havilland, Dancer Martha Graham, Designer Claire McCardell, Dorothy Fosdick of the State Department, Educator Pearl Wanamaker and Scientist Mildred Rebstock.

Women Lawyers Honor Two Judges

The Women's Bar Association of the District of Columbia was hostess at two parties yesterday.

The society honored Judge Edith Cockrill of the District Juvenile Court, and Judge Mary Barlow of the Municipal Court, at a tea at 1634 I st. nw.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Girl Had Lovely Sister, Wonderful Parents And Unhappy Childhood for No Reason, She Says; Now She's Involved in Shameful Plight

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I've been hoping to find in your column an answer to my problem, but apparently nobody else has been as stupid as I; or if they have been, they have sense enough to keep quiet about it. I cannot keep quiet any longer. It's killing me. I shall be brief as possible because I know you will have little sympathy for me and I guess I don't deserve it.

I was an unhappy child—for no reason whatever. My parents were wonderful and did all they could to make something of me, but it was no use; I was just a sow's ear and not a silk purse. Mother dressed me as best she could and I had the same advantages my sister had, but she was just naturally smart and beautiful, with a lovely personality, and had only to be herself and everyone adored her. I know you're going to say, "That's it." But truly it isn't. I loved my sister and was happy to shine in her reflected glory.

Sinned on Rebound

INFERIORITY—how I hate the word. But why? True, I am no raving beauty; but neither am I an old hag. Yet the fact remains that the boy I loved married my best friend. Like all the others, he rejected me. I repeat, why? Was I just born unlucky?

Even in writing this I am trying to evade the real issue, which is that I have committed an unforgiveable sin. And I am still committing it.

I am living with a man out of wedlock. I will not try to alibi, except to say that I was sort of shanghaied into it with a promise of marriage, and I was so desperately unhappy that I took even that chance and lost.

Now three years later I have a darling baby boy 1 year old. The father still refuses to marry me and is abusive and always threatening to reveal this terrible secret. What can I do? I know that I deserve no help, but there is my precious baby. If you can't help me it's the end. C. S.

Self Condemnation Worst Failing

DEAR C. S.: You say of the boy who married your best friend, "Like all others, he rejected me." By that you mean all others whose love you wanted, of course. And who would be first of these? Your mother, naturally, and then your father.

Despite your stout insistence that your parents loved you wonderfully well, your narrative starkly indicates that they had eyes only for your enchanting sister, while making quite a virtue, on second thought, of giving you conscientious devotion—doing their very best for this distressing child, their manner implied.

That is the background reason for your childhood unhappiness, your deep-dyed sense of accursed inferiority and your cowering reflex of apologetic self condemnation in your approach to every human relation, before the other person has opened his mouth or made a move. An analyst with whom I've discussed your letter says this blind reflex of self-damnation is your worst affliction, worse than anything others can do to you by words or attitudes, and that its unconscious purpose is to steal the other person's thunder before he can criticize you.

Needs Help to See Objectively

A PERSON compulsively engrossed in self condemnation simply can't see the truth of things; thus, instead of dealing effectively with real problems, which are a part of every life, he creates relationship difficulties where none would exist if his head were clear of imaginary threats. And that's your history up to now, caused by getting more criticism than love from your mother in formative years.

For advice—the help you need will be found through the Mental Hygiene Clinic in your city, listed as such in the telephone directory. To regain personality health, you must have objective light on your so-called "terrible secret."

You must discuss your status with a professional person who will respect your confidence, understand your sense of peril and provide the leadership required to put things right—and at the clinic you will find a psychiatrist, a psychologist and a social worker on call five days a week.

As you are helped to see the parts of the picture objectively, you will be able to deal rationally and competently with the father of your child, either to establish a sound relationship or to rebuild your life apart from him on a good foundation. As your emotions are released from yesterday's griefs and clearly focussed on reality here and now, you will find great changes for the better taking place. M. H.

Air Force Men Make 'Difficult' Husbands, Says One of Them

Washington's Air Force men make "difficult" husbands. And that comes straight from the top Air Force man of the country, Gen. Hoyt Vandenberg, a husband himself.

In an address yesterday at the Army Navy Country Club, General Vandenberg urged members of the Air Force Wives Club to be especially sympathetic to their husbands these days.

We're experiencing a cold war now "that is pretty warm for Air Force," he said. "The jobs of Air Force men in Washington are harder than in any other section of the world," he continued. "And these men make pretty difficult husbands."

The general advised Air Force wives to listen to their husbands when they come home from work—let them "talk their frustrations out."

"But many times what they say shouldn't be repeated," he warned.

Also, the general asked the women to be "understanding" if their husbands come home a day or two late from their regular cross-country flights.

"Don't make them feel they ought to rush to get back on time just because you wouldn't understand if they didn't."

Daffodil Pickers Will Sip Tea

Mr. and Mrs. Norment D. Hawkins will again open their beautiful old Georgian home near McLean, Va., as the setting for the Daffodil Festival to be given by Continental Dames Chapter, DAR, today and Friday from 2 to 5 p. m. Proceeds will be used to further the work of the chapter.

Tea will be served on the spacious veranda as the guests return from the daffodil field.

TONGUE AND POTATO HASH WITH SHIRRED EGGS

Ingredients: 1 cup finely ground smoked tongue (firmly packed), 2 cups mashed potatoes, salt and freshly ground pepper to taste, 4 eggs.

Method: Mix the tongue and mashed potatoes together in a mixing bowl and add salt and pepper to taste. Divide mixture among four individual baking dishes and make a depression in the center of each large enough to hold an egg. Bake in a slow (325 F.) oven for 15 to 20 minutes; remove from oven, break an egg into each depression and return to oven for 12 to 15 minutes longer, or until eggs are desired doneness. Makes 4 servings.

Winning Tables Vie With Decorative Guests at Party

By Peggy Preston

IT WASN'T possible to give 51 prizes, so the judges settled for seven.

But the handsomely decorated tables which took honors in the State and Territory contest at yesterday's giant "party with a cause" of the Woman's National Democratic Club competed with more than just other tables. A star-studded audience headed by Mrs. Truman; Christian Dior, the French designer and his newest collection of fashions; lavish gifts and souvenirs were but a few of the attractions at the club's annual spring luncheon.

More than 900 guests attended the event which was for the benefit of the clubhouse building fund. The throng completely filled the Presidential and Congressional Rooms of the Statler Hotel, and an overflow of tables filled the foyer outside for the spectacular party.

Lines Formed Early

LONG LINES of impatient ladies formed an hour before the doors opened at 1 o'clock. State pride ran high as they sought out the tables that represented their respective sections of the country. Mrs. Truman, from the vantage point of the head table, viewed the Missouri tables nearby. In the absence of Mrs. Barkley, Vice President Alben Barkley's daughter, Mrs. O. Max Truitt, was seated at the Kentucky table.

All the 48 States and the three Territories were represented by at least one, and some by as many as four, tables. The judges, after deliberating more than two hours, awarded the following prizes:

Most Symbolic and Authentic—Maryland, first prize; Mississippi, second.

Most Unforgettable—Arizona.

Table Copied Old Fort

FOR COLOR and evidence of forethought it was certainly the most successful luncheon of the year. While the band played "Maryland, My Maryland," Mrs. Landsdale G. Sasscer accepted the prize for her committee from that State. The table saluted historic Fort McHenry with an exact replica of the fort as a centerpiece. Surrounding it was a streamer on which was printed the words and music of the "Star Spangled Banner."

Delaware, judged the most original, used a photostatic copy of the Constitution to point up the fact that that State was first to sign the document. Another first prize winner, South Carolina, depicted a typical Southern mansion of pre-Civil War days.

To mention but a few of the outstanding tables:

Idaho was centered with a 6-foot potato man, made of 160 pounds of potatoes; at his feet sat a bucket containing $5000 in silver dollars. Massachusetts showed a giant sailing vessel on which miniature men fought the battle of the Boston Tea Party; Rhode Island used bathers at Bailey's Beach, lolling before the famous clubhouse; Arizona employed with authentic handiwork of the Navaho Indians; California copied a miniature float from the Tournament of Roses; West Virginia used corn in both solid and liquid form; Kentucky saluted Churchill Downs with the Whitney Derby Cup and jockey wearing the Whitney colors; Hawaii used beautiful floral decorations from the islands.

Three Well-Known Judges

JUDGES for the contest were Dr. Luther H. Evans, the Librarian of Congress; Albert DePilla, horticultural expert, United States Botanic Gardens, and Jinx Falkenburg, television star and newspaper columnist.

Seated at the head table with Mrs. Truman were Mrs. Woodrow Wilson; Mrs. J. Borden Harriman; Mrs. Julien Friant, president; Mrs. James A. Murray, general chairman, and Mr. Dior.

A United Nations table, with Mrs. Leslie Biffle as chairman, had guests from the diplomatic corps, including Mme. Bonnet, wife of the French Ambassador. Mrs. Perle Mesta, United States Minister to Luxembourg was also seated there.

Following the fashion show, the tables were left intact and the room cleared for a 4 to 7 o'clock cocktail party, attended by husbands and friends of club members.

The presentation of fashions was made by Julius Garfinckel & Co.

The Washington Post

SOUTH CAROLINA, with a centerpiece depicting a plantation scene in pre-Civil War days, won a first prize in the State Table Contest at yesterday's spring luncheon and fashion show of the Woman's National Democratic Club. It was named Most Beautiful Table at the party which took place at the Statler Hotel

Among those attending the luncheon were Mrs. David Acheson, Mrs. Donald Hiss, Mrs. Charles Peck, Mrs. Alton Childs, Mrs. Lloyd B. Van Da Linda, Mrs. Frank MacMurray and Mrs. Reeve Hoover.

Mrs. Henry Grady Opens Greek Children's Fund Drive

Lucretia Grady, wife of the United States Ambassador to Greece, Henry Grady, gave a colorful account of Greek recovery yesterday when she opened a Nation-wide appeal for the Save the Children Federation.

Mrs. Grady can give you any number of reasons for helping Greek children through the SCF. But first and foremost comes her zealous admiration for what she calls the Greek "spirit."

It is this "spirit," together with religious faith, which has kept the Greeks a happy, contented people despite their hardships, she said.

"Never before have I seen a place which can be helped with so little" asserts Lucretia Grady.

Mrs. Grady outlined the Federation's Child Sponsorship Plan whereby a person in this country may "adopt" a child in Greece.

Under the plan the "sponsor" contributes $8 a month to provide clothing, shoes and essential food for the child. The federation program also supplies necessary equipment for Greek schools. Many American children in underprivileged areas have also been helped by the plan.

Runnemede Daughters to Meet Friday

The annual meeting of the Orders of Distinction Committee of the National Society, Daughters of the Barons of Runnemede, will be held Friday at the Sulgrave Club at 3:30 p. m. This group was organized in 1929 to increase interest in the restoration of the Garter Chapel at Windsor Castle, which needed major repairs. Substantial contributions were made by the members for that purpose. Programs are devoted to the history of Knighthood and the great characters of the Orders; also the surviving castles and cathedrals with which they were connected.

Even a Flying Carpet Must Need Sweeping (Think of the Star Dust); So Ordinary Rugs Demand More

EVEN the flying carpet in the "Arabian Nights" must have gotten shabby if allowed to bump against too many clouds or land in dusty fields!

Good carpets need—and deserve—good care. They'll last longer and remain more beautiful if they get it, believes M. J. of Arlington, who wrote the following:

DEAR ANNE:
I purchased an American Oriental rug, to be delivered to my apartment soon. Can you give me helpful hints on how to care for it?

Is once a week too often for vacuuming? How often should a carpet sweeper be used? How often should the rug be turned around? (About one-half will be exposed to direct light from a large picture window, while the other extends into the shadowy part of the living room.) What attention should the rubber composition pad under the rug get?

M. J.
Arlington

Carpet experts say not to be afraid to vacuum your rug every day, even when it's new. Ground-in dirt in a rug cuts the fibers. The cleaner you keep it, the less likelihood there is of this happening. Vacuum it at least twice a week, and use the carpet sweeper whenever it seems necessary. Both are better than a broom, as the sharp corn bristles of the latter are apt to cut or pull the yarn.

Prevent moth damage by occasionally running the vacuum cleaner over the back of your rug and moving heavy furniture so you can clean under it thoroughly. Use protector cups under heavy furniture.

Turn the rug about three times a year to distribute wear and exposure to light. When you turn your rug, give the back a good cleaning and treat spots and stains. Clean the rug pad with the vacuum cleaner, too.

If you'd like a nice booklet that gives a lot more details about rug care—how to remove spots, liven the color, etc.—you can get one free by writing the Carpet Institute, Inc., 530 Fifth Avenue, New York 1, N. Y. The name of this leaflet is "Care of Your Carpets and Rugs."

DEAR ANNE:
Can you tell me how to soften stale marshmallows? If it is impossible to do so, could you suggest any recipes that call for hard marshmallows?

ANITA PRESTON,
802 North Wayne st., Arlington

Stale marshmallows can be softened by steaming them in the top part of a double boiler. Add a few drops of water if necessary.

Since they're likely to loose their shape and get sticky from such treatment, it's a good idea to use them for cooking afterward. You can make marshmallow icing, desserts calling for melted marshmallows, marshmallow sauce—lots of different things that you should be able to find in almost any cookbook. One such recipe, for a sauce that can be used over ice cream, cake or pudding, follows:

MARSHMALLOW SAUCE
¼ pound marshmallows
1 cup sugar
½ cup water
2 drops peppermint oil or ½ teaspoon vanilla

Steam marshmallows until soft in double boiler. Cook sugar and water together until it spins a thread when a little is dropped from the tip of a cold fork. Beat softened marshmallows into the syrup. Add flavoring. Keep hot in double boiler or serve cold.

200 Children Quit School as Coal Smolders

Firemen were forced to move 75 tons of coal from the basement storage bin of the Somerset Elementary School, Chevy Chase, yesterday to extinguish fire which broke out in the pile.

About 200 children, who filed from the building in an orderly fire drill shortly after 10 a. m., were sent home for the day.

Members of the Chevy Chase and Bethesda Fire Departments shoveled for more than three hours to move coal from the bin to the adjoining boiler room and the school yard.

The alarm was sounded by Mrs. Kathryne Bricker, school principal, when coal gas fumes filled the school despite an earlier wetting down of the pile by janitors who noticed the fumes after opening the building after the week-long Easter holiday.

Firemen theorized the fire was caused by spontaneous combustion of damp coal, recently delivered, which ignited a board partition next to the pile.

Chevy Chase Women's Club Tax Exempt

The Maryland Court of Appeals ruled yesterday that the Woman's Club of Chevy Chase is exempt from property tax.

The decision climaxed a long fight by the club to obtain relief from real estate taxes on the clubhouse property at 7431 Connecticut ave., Chevy Chase.

Yesterday's ruling by the appellate court overturned a decision by Judge Charles Woodward in Montgomery County Circuit Court August 5, 1949.

In a unanimous decision, the court ordered the State Tax Commission to abate a 1948 tax of $1260 on the $44,000 clubhouse and land.

"We express no opinion" on the question as to whether the club is primarily a social or charitable organization, Judge Charles Markell wrote for the court.

The club has contended, through its attorney, Mrs. Kathryn Lawlor, that its purposes were "of a charitable, benevolent and civic nature." An act of the General Assembly in 1949 granted tax exemption to such organizations.

A more specific act passed this year directed authorities to abate any 1948-49 levies which would have been exempted by the 1949 act. This act, effective June 1, would render the taxes in question "uncollectible," Judge Markell commented.

Pressmen Ask Writ Against International

Printing Pressmen's Local 1 yesterday asked District Court for a mandatory injunction ordering the International to revoke the charter of another local recently formed here.

Also filed was a motion to adjudge the international in contempt of court for the alleged violation of a court order prohibiting punitive action against Local 1.

According to the suit, the parent union has formed Local 351, designated for pressmen in commercial shops. The new local, it is charged, will deprive Local 1 of about 250 of its 1000 members.

The union controversy arose when Local 1 began proceedings against the estate of the late George L. Berry for alleged misuse of union funds. Berry was for many years president of the international union.

The international ordered the charter of Local 1 revoked. But Judge Matthew F. McGuire later issued an injunction against the revocation and prohibited the parent organization from forming another unit here known as Local 1-A.

Alexandria Decrees End Of Emergency

The Alexandria School Board last night decreed an end to the existing school building emergency and thus set machinery in motion for a balanced city budget for 1950.

By certifying the emergency's end the board paved the way for diversion of $238,000 in State aid funds to its indebtedness program for the year. Elimination of the debt payment, currently listed in the city budget, would more than offset a budget deficit now estimated at $212,000.

Before acting, the board was told by Mayor Franklin P. Backus that $335,000 included in an emergency building grant could be applied to bonded indebtedness if the school board certified that the emergency was over. Since the budget debt payment is only $238,000 for this year, only that amount may be taken from the building grant. The residue would be kept in trust for the city, Backus explained.

The $335,000 is part of a 47-million-dollar grant approved by the Virginia General Assembly for school building purposes.

It is to be disbursed over a two-year period with the city to receive an additional $170,000 next year, making a total of $505,000 earmarked for Alexandria out of the total grant.

Although the bill authorizing the grant provides the money can be diverted to indebtedness if the emergency is over, the action still is subject to final approval by the State board of education.

School Superintendent T. C. Williams told the school board that the city now has more than $2,500,000 in school construction under contract. All projects are to be completed by next year, he said, and the new buildings and additions will meet all existing emergency needs.

Hate Causes Most Woes, Meeting Hears

Hate causes most of the world's problems, and love is the sole hope for peace, Dr. William C. Menninger, psychiatrist, told a Washington audience last night.

Dr. Menninger spoke at a public meeting of the Washington Institute of Mental Hygiene, in the New Interior Department auditorium.

Everyone, Dr. Menninger declared, must share the responsibility of combating and neutralizing "the many expressions of human hate which we see about us."

And though none is willing, individually, to accept that responsibility, all must do so collectively, he warned.

"Some of us who live in this world behave in such a way to be the cause for the emotional ill health of so many others of us," he declared.

Dr. Menninger pointed out that, in understanding human nature, the relation between the basic drives of love and hate are all important.

"Love," he said, "provides the only tenable basis for the formation of happy human relationships. A social and mature adult . . . derives more satisfaction from giving love than receiving it.

"For only as we love those about us can we control the hate that also comes from the deepest layers of our personality. Hate is the causative factor of most of the world's problems—in mental illness, prejudice, intolerance, selfishness, suspicion and war."

Dr. Menninger is general secretary of the psychiatric treatment and research center founded by his family, the Menninger Foundation in Topeka, Kans.

GEORGE MORRIS FAY, Attorney

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT for the District of Columbia, holding Probate Court. United States of America, plaintiff, vs. unknown next of kin of Charles Thompson (also known as Culusd Thomasian), deceased, defendants. Administration No. 68363. The object of this suit is to declare the escheat to the United States of America of an estate derived from payments made by the Veterans' Administration, in the hands of Eugene W. LaRochelle, administrator, application having been made herein by the United States, by George Morris Fay, United States Attorney for the District of Columbia, for a finding that Charles Thompson (also known as Culusd Thomasian), died intestate without next of kin within the degree of relationship recognized by the laws of distribution, Sec. 18-717 D. C. Code of 1940; 31 Stat. 1251 as amended by Act of June 26, 1934 (48 Stat. 1230), and for a decree that said estate escheat to the United States of America in accordance with the provisions of Title 38 U. S. Code Sec. 450 (3). Applicant for Radio Station Tried to Aid Capone, Cox Says

Miami, Fla., April 12 (AP).—Former Gov. James M. Cox of Ohio told a Federal Communications Commission examiner today that Arthur (Mickey) McBride, millionaire Cleveland sportsman and taxi magnate, once tried to intercede with him in behalf of Gangster Al Capone.

Cox, publisher of the Miami Daily News and other newspapers, testified for an FCC hearing on the proposed transfer of the license of radio station WMIE of Miami to the Sun Coast Broadcasting Co., principally owned by McBride.

Because Cox was indisposed, he testified before Examiner Leo Resnick at his home. Attorney A. Harry Backer of the FCC, Paul Segal, counsel for Sun Coast, and a court reporter also were present.

Tells of Battle Waged

Cox told the examiner the Daily News in 1930 waged a battle against Capone taking up residence at Palm Island, Miami Beach, and later waged a constant campaign to rid the area of Capone after he moved here.

The publisher said he first met McBride aboard a Florida-bound train.

Later, during the "heat" of the anti-Capone battle being waged by the newspaper, he met McBride on a golf course.

"He immediately went into the Capone thing," Cox testified. "The Daily News had been exposing Capone and his henchmen. We had found some of his hoodlums on a golf course with sawed off shotguns in their golf bags.

"McBride said to me: 'You're all wrong about Capone. He's a nice fellow. I'd like to bring him around.'

"I told McBride, 'you get out of here and never speak to me again . . .' and he never has."

McBride's office in Cleveland issued a statement in his behalf, saying: "I never knew Capone. I never met him. I never intervened for him with Cox or anyone else. Cox had his trouble in Florida in 1930. I never was interested in Florida until 1932, when the Cox-Capone row had blown over."

The statement also declared that "I never talked with Cox on the golf links about Capone" but said Cox once "brought up Capone's name" when "I met Cox on a train sometime after 1932."

"As to Cox having told me in 1930, as he claims, not to speak to him again, remember what I have just said, that he talked with me on a train in 1932 or thereabouts."

Denies "Slanting" News

In cross-examination, the Sun Coast attorney, Segal, asked the publisher if it was the policy of the Daily News to "slant" news against Station WMIE.

Cox said it was not the policy to slant news against the station and added that he never had complained about WMIE's activities.

McBride's son, Edward, 26-year-old University of Miami student, yesterday testified that he was sole owner of Continental Press, national race wire service. Young McBride told the hearing that although he is owner, he has no active part in the operation and doesn't know anything about the activities of the service.

The hearing was called to investigate the qualifications of the elder McBride and Daniel J. Sherby to operate WMIE.

Florida Attorney General Richard Ervin sent a letter to the FCC examiner saying: "I expect to oppose any attempt on the part of organized criminal efforts being put forth to take over an enterprise as important to the public interest and welfare as a radio broadcasting company.

"The operation and control of a radio broadcasting company by persons who have a definite linkage with racketeers would be a public menace," Ervin wrote.

Sander Given Hearing By State Medical Board

Concord, N. H., April 12 (AP).—Dr. Hermann N. Sander may know within a week whether he can returned to his medical practice—a question which has gone unanswered since his March 9 acquittal of a charge of murder involving an air injection into the veins of a woman cancer patient.

The 41-year-old Manchester doctor was closeted today for nearly three hours with the five members of the New Hampshire Board of Registration in Medicine.

Dr. Paul Dye, president of the board, said a decision may come in less than a week."

Conferences Resumed On Shipping Walkout

New York, April 12 (AP).—A special panel of Federal mediators is set for a conference Thursday in a final effort to head off a strike of East and Gulf Coast steamship officers. It will be held in New York.

The United States Conciliation and Mediation Service said in Washington today that both the ships' owners and AFL masters, mates and pilots union had agreed to the meeting.

Francis: He Creates a Problem

Synopsis: Yesterday our shavetail hero got lost from his command in Burma, and fell in with an Army mule, who certainly could talk, and who said he could fly. His name was Francis. When the lieutenant got hit, Francis took him on his back and went away from there.

By David Stern

When I regained consciousness, I was in a hospital. My leg, swathed in bandages, throbbed. I was very tired.

After a few minutes a doctor came over. Taking my pulse he looked down at me. "Well, lieutenant, so you're awake. How are you feeling?"

"I'm all right," I said. "What happened to me?"

"Caught a piece of shrapnel in the thigh. Nothing serious. Have you out of here in no time."

"How did I get here?" I asked.

The doctor released my wrist. "Ambulance, I suppose. You better not try to talk."

My brain did a mental backflip. The mule!

Francis!

During the next week I spent my days going over and over in my mind every incident of my meeting with the mule. I tried to recall each word that had been spoken.

A captain from Army Intelligence sat down beside my bed.

He wanted to know how I had managed to make my way back from behind the Jap lines.

I decided I'd better tell him the whole story.

"I was carried by an Army mule," I said. "Remarkable thing, captain, the animal could talk."

"Ah . . . Yes . . . A mule carried . . ." Suddenly the captain straightened with such force he almost went over backwards.

"What did you say the mule could do?"

"Talk."

"That's what I thought you said." The captain jumped up, skittled around to the end of my bed, and examined my hospital records.

"This doesn't indicate there's anything the matter with your mind, lieutenant."

"There isn't," I said.

"But you just told me," said the captain, "that a mule talked to you."

"He did."

"You sure of that?"

"Yes, sir."

The captain lowered his head and looked at me through his eyebrows. Then, without another word, he walked out of the ward.

Ten minutes later two doctors, a major, and a captain, approached. The major sat on the foot of my bed. The captain pulled up a chair.

"Well, how are you today, young fellow?" said the major with that heartiness which is the stock in trade of psychologists.

"Fine," I said. "Just fine, sir."

"Young man, I hear you told a captain from G-2 that a mule talked to you. That right?"

"Yes, sir."

"Ha, ha," said the major, "my patients like to have their little jokes."

"I wasn't joking, sir."

"You mean to say, lieutenant, a regular mule talked to you, I mean, the way I'm speaking to you now?"

"That's right, sir."

An hour later I was moved to the neuropsychiatric ward.

There was a nurse in charge. Her name was Valorie Humpert. And she enjoyed the conviction that the good Lord had created mental disturbances as a personal favor to her. She was extremely grateful.

"I hear, lieutenant," she said the next moring, pausing beside my bed, "you know a mule who can talk."

"That's right," I said.

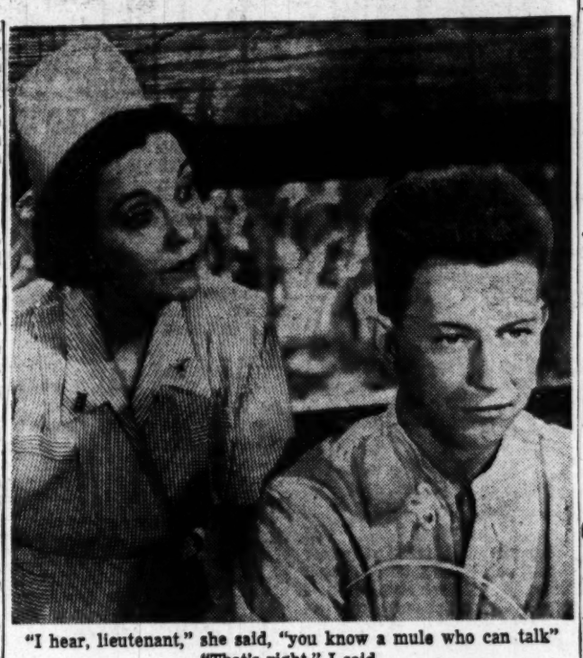
I groaned.



"I hear, lieutenant," she said, "you know a mule who can talk"
"That's right," I said
Miss Humpert gave me a smile. "I think that's cute," she said

Miss Humpert came over and sat on the edge of my bed.

"Could the animal do anything else unusual?" she asked.

"The mule could fly."

"Fly! Why, how wonderful. Did you see it fly, lieutenant?"

"No," I said.

"Well, then how do you know?"

"The mule told me."

"Of course," said Miss Humpert. "How too utterly stupid of me. I think mental cases are fascinating. Simply fascinating."

They put me on a milk diet.

At the end of three weeks I had gained 11 pounds, felt like a prewar butter-ball, hated cows, was dubious of my sanity, and had decided I'd better keep mum about Francis.

My leg was completely healed.

The major and the captain came to see me. Miss Humpert hovered in the background.

"How are you feeling now?" the major asked.

"Fine," I said.

"And now, lieutenant," said the major with a sweeping gesture, "suppose you tell us about the mule who could fly and talk."

I was thoroughly tired of the hospital. "I must have been shell-shocked," I said.

Miss Humpert's lower jaw fell.

"No, no," said the major. "We call it 'fatigued.' You're thinking of the last war, lieutenant."

"I must have been 'fatigued'," I agreed.

Coyote-Dog Hybrid Menaces Animals In Adirondacks

A new beast of prey, a coyote-dog hybrid, has appeared in the Adirondack Mountains and other areas.

It is swifter than the dog, warier than the coyote, more vicious than either, says the Fish and Wildlife Service.

In the Adirondacks it seems for the first time to have become a fairly stabilized type—a type that has been breeding for several generations. Hunting techniques used against coyotes in the thinly-populated West cannot safely be used in the more heavily settled East.

The animals have been attacking deer, livestock and poultry in increasing numbers in Lewis, Franklin, Essex and St. Lawrence Counties, N. Y.

The beasts vary in color from red to brown to white. They betray a chow, shepherd or hound ancestry. All resemble the coyote more strongly than the dog.

They'll Manage Somehow

Larger Eyes Stylish? Gals Will Wear 'Em

By John Crosby

AN anonymous and unseen young woman on a recent NBC telecast informed me that the lady of fashion will wear larger eyes this year. Her lips, declared this invisible prophet, will be fuller. Her legs—this, I think, will be the hardest part—will be longer and slimmer.

I have no idea how the distaff population plans to accommodate itself to these new dimensions, how a girl goes about enlarging her eyes or lengthening and slenderizing her legs, but I haven't the slightest doubt that it will be done.

Women have always had an incredible facility for adjusting their frames to the exacting requirements of fashion almost at a moment's notice. In the '20s the bust fell out of fashion and was discarded. In the '30s it was restored almost overnight. In the '90s a girl had hips. Today she hasn't. Next year, I expect women will be asked to lengthen their necks a couple of inches and they'll manage somehow.

Heads Versus Lettuce

HERE'S a little memorandum for junior. Bob Shaw, a scriptwriter for "Mr. District Attorney," and no relative of the aforementioned George Bernard, has just returned from a tour of the Nation's women's clubs during which, among other things, he explained sound effects. "When a scene calls for a person to be stabbed, we employ a head of cabbage and the sound effects man drives a knife into it. The result sounds like an actual stabbing."

Now, look here, Mr. Shaw! I seriously dispute that statement. The last time I stabbed anyone it sounded not at all like a knife entering a head of cabbage; it sounded exactly like a knife entering a human being—a sort of soft, squishy noise, human flesh being a rather more fragile envelope than the skin of a cabbage.

I consider this rank misrepresentation, especially to the young who may go all the way through life without ever learning how a stabbing actually sounds. It's my suggestion—the next time the situation arises—you stab a human being. I have a little list here of 4268 expandable human being. Two thirds of them are vice presidents of networks or advertising agencies. The rest are scriptwriters for mystery shows.

Most Confused

THE title race for the most confused quiz contestant of 1949-50 is still open. In fact, there are even more entrants than usual this year. However, the girl I'm backing—to come out fearlessly a month before the season ends—is the lady who appeared on Kay Kyser's Kollege of Musical Knowledge.

It was a sort of charade and the lady was asked to name the nicknames of several well-known personalities who were impersonated by various members of the Kyser organization. The first was a man wearing a baseball suit with "Yankees" writ boldly across the front, number "5" writ on the rear. The man was carrying a pair of hedge clippers.

"Jack the Ripper," shouted the lady triumphantly.

The DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

Irish Sense of Humor Saves the Day

The National Press Club's kitchen is better than most. It serves good meals at reasonable prices.

But members take a great delight in complaining about the food. Apparently everybody whose dues are paid up is entitled to full beefing privileges.

By way of illustration, here's a sidelight to the story of the visit of Sir Basil Brooke, Prime Minister of Northern Ireland, who was this week's luncheon speaker.

As might be expected, some of the club's more belligerent Irish members were pretty bitter about the invitation which had been extended to the controversial spokesman for Ulster.

A small group gathered on the morning of the luncheon and systematically denounced Sir Basil, the partition of Ireland, the British, and then Sir Basil again.

"Mayor O'Dwyer had the right idea," growled one Hibernian. "The man never should have been invited. It's an outrage."

"Nonsense," murmured a dyspeptic old-timer. "It's our chance to get even. He'll probably try to eat the food, and it'll serve him right."

THE LIFE YOU SAVE MAY BE YOUR OWN

As is their annual custom, the Travelers Insurance Companies come up with some sobering statistics about auto accidents.

They show, for example, that there's three times as much chance of getting hurt in the evening rush as in the morning jam.

The traffic load is almost exactly the same. But in the morning motorists are fresh and alert; in the evening they're tired. The moral, of course, is: When you're droopy, don't drive.

Another startling statistic: About half of all fatalities occur between Friday evening and Monday morning—which is the period when we're either rushing off to or returning from a so-called happy weekend.

What's more, we can't blame auto accidents on bad brakes, road conditions, and similar alibis.

Of vehicles involved in fatal accidents last year, 95 per cent were in "good" condition, 83 percent were moving straight ahead, the street was dry in 78 percent of the cases and the weather clear in 85 percent. And more than 97 percent of the drivers had more than one year of experience.

The explanation for most accidents is still what it was described as two generations ago: "The loose nut behind the steering wheel."

MAIL BAG

Dear Bill:

You gave up too easily on your campaign to have less disruption of traffic while the white lines are being painted on our streets.

Back in dear old Brooklyn they did their painting at night. What's so different about Washington?

Speaking of these lane lines, I can't understand why we use two lines for pedestrian crosswalks when one would suffice.

The one which serves as a "stop" line for vehicular traffic is needed, of course. But the other, which is merely an extension of the curb line, seems to be a waste of paint, labor and time.

Herb Harris.,
1121 N. Kensington st.,
Arlington, Va.

Dear Herb:

Will Rogers pointed out many years ago that the white lines on our streets are supposed to define very clearly the areas in which a pedestrian has the right of way.

He explained that if a motorist knocks down a pedestrian who is inside the white lines, it doesn't count. The driver must wait until he catches his quarry outside the lines and then hit him again.

Teacher Units Ask Leave Bill Revisions

Representatives of eight teachers' organizations yesterday asked the Board of Education for revisions in the present teachers' leave bill.

The present legislation, enacted last year, is responsible for "low morale" among the teachers, they contended.

Of the 10 persons who appeared before the board's committee on legislation at a meeting at Franklin Administration Building, only one endorsed the present law and said no change is necessary.

Leave Accumulation Sought

Most of the changes urged by the teachers are embodied in legislation proposed by Senator Olin D. Johnson (D., S. Car.).

Among the specific changes the teachers called for were:

1. Accumulation, without the present limit of 20 days, of one day's leave for each year's service.

2. Permission to borrow 25 instead of the present 20 days of leave in advance.

3. A broadened interpretation of "pressing personal emergency."

Substitute Changes Urged

4. Permission to pay a substitute up to a certain number of days after sick leave has expired. (Until last year, teachers had to pay a substitute whenever they were absent, since there were no sick leave provisions.)

5. Permission to return to the same job after an extended illness, without a Health Department physical examination.

These changes, presented by Miss Helen Samuels of the Joint Legislative Council, were supported in general by representatives of the Elementary Classroom, Junior High and High School Teachers Associations, Locals 8 and 27 of the American Federation of Teachers, the D. C. Education Association, and the attendance officers.

Carleton Washburn, representative of the D. C. Vocational Association, said his organization was in full accord with the present legislation, and opposed the changes advocated by the other groups at the hearing.

Dr. Hobart M. Corning, superintendent of schools, has in the past maintained that the present law is one of the best in the country and does not need major revisions.

Policeman Denied Beer License After Barrett Objects

The District Alcoholic Beverage Control Board has turned down the application of a policeman for a beer license to go with his restaurant at 729½ st. se.

Police Superintendent Robert J. Barrett had asked disapproval of Ninth Precinct Policeman John U. Carroll's request on the ground that a police officer should not hold an alcoholic beverage license.

The reason the board gave in turning down the request Monday was "inappropriate place." The restaurant is located close to the John Tyler School and the Wilson Memorial Methodist Church, both of which objected.

McCarthy's Backstage Backers

By Drew Pearson

No matter which side of the McCarthy-State Department dispute you're on, it is important to know some of the factors behind the energetic Senator from Wisconsin. Supported by a conglomeration of backstage interests, including one or two Government figures, here is a roll call of the men who are giving him ammunition:

Sen. McCarthy

1. The Kuomintang Lobby—It has millions to spend, once hired Defense Secretary Louis Johnson, includes the powerful brothers-in-law of Chiang Kai-shek, Dr. H. W. Kung and T. V. Soong. More about this lobby later.

2. William J. Goodwin—A former Coughlinite and Christian Fronter, he is paid $25,000 annually by the Kuomintang lobby, wines and dines Congressmen, deluges editors with propaganda on China.

3. Ex-Congressman Kersten of Wisconsin—Defeated for reelection, Kersten is McCarthy's chief backstage sleuth. For a time he occupied Room 316 in the Congressional Hotel, where he placed so many phone calls it attracted the attention of hotel employes. The hotel bills were paid not by Kersten, but by McCarthy.

4. Newspaper chains—Two newsmen formerly with big chain papers are attached to McCarthy to write speeches and statements. That's why his statements make good news copy, usually hit the headlines. One newsman is George Watters, formerly with the Chicago Tribune group. The Scripps-Howard chain also gives its blessing. None of these men appear on McCarthy's Senate pay roll, nor do the four ex-FBI men he once hired. So someone else must be footing the bill.

5. Alfred Kohlberg—Big importer of lace hankies, does a business of $1,500,000 a year with China, and admits he finances his American China Policy Association—a pressure association—partly out of that business. Kohlberg is close to the Kuomintang lobby, hates Owen Lattimore and believes anyone not a rabble-rousing anti-Red is automatically a Communist.

6. Old-Line Career Diplomats—Most are loyal to Acheson. But one or two disgruntled extremists, sore at the new blood injected into the State Department, have sent exaggerated reports to McCarthy.

Chinese Money

Of these backstage McCarthy helpers, most powerful is the Kuomintang or Chiang Kai-shek lobby, financed by United States taxpayers' money supposed to have gone to China for relief.

This, maybe, explains part of McCarthy's financial backing.

Working in friendly cooperation with the Kuomintang lobby in this country have been former Ambassador William C. Bullitt, Gen. Claire Chennault, former Senator Worth Clark of Idaho; Alfred Kohlberg, and Senators Bridges of New Hampshire and Knowland of California.

One of this lobby's neat byplays was sending former Senator Clark to China in 1948 to make a supposedly impartial survey and then recommend more United States money for Chiang.

Here are significant facts behind the byplay: Kohlberg gave a $1000 campaign contribution to popular Senator Styles Bridges, then chairman of the Senate Appropriations Committee. Bridges appointed Clark to go to China and make an impartial survey.

'Impartial' Survey

Clark, however, was by no means impartial. He had been associated with Tom Corcoran, chief representative of Chiang's brother-in-law, T. V. Soong, and who was paid a fortune by the Kuomintang crowd. Clark took with him to China Eddie Lockett, formerly with Time magazine, now a publicity man. Part of their expenses was paid by the Chinese Nationalists, despite the fact that they were supposed to be working for the United States Senate and American taxpayers.

Clark and Lockett came back, vigorously recommended more money for Chiang.

Coughlinites Aid McCarthy

The Kuomintang lobby has also enlisted the Coughlinite extremists. Among its friends is Robert M. Harris, now under indictment for violation of the Lobbying Act, and who acted as Father Coughlin's broker in buying silver. There is also William J. Goodwin, the paid Kuomintang lobbyist.

Goodwin, who collected $65,000 from the Kuomintang lobby in two years, was not such a good friend of the Chinese before he got on the payroll. Shortly before Pearl Harbor he wrote a letter not unfavorable to the Japanese, and critical of the Chinese; while, on October 25, 1941, just a few weeks before Pearl Harbor, Goodwin wrote a letter to Senator Connally of Texas defending Hitler.

"Why should America destroy Hitler?" he asked. "As between the two nations, we are the violators of international law, not Germany."

Goodwin has been coming down to Washington from New York almost every week for more than two years, buttonholing Congressmen, and spilling vitriol against "crooks and thieves" in the State Department.

Now he is putting the same accusations in the mouth of Senator McCarthy, whose championship of the Nazi murderers at Malmedy indicates that he and Goodwin have several things in common.

HAVE YOU ever seen a prettier sight than our fruit and vegetable stands? If they don't put you in the frame of mind for a spring salad, for creamed new potatoes and peas, for a delightful vegetable dinner—then nothing will! They're so fresh and green, that surely Les Halles and all of the other famed markets in the world could have nothing on us! Come see them yourself, this weekend, and see if we don't speak the truth!

DID you know that we "candle" our own eggs at Center Market City? At the big poultry stands, merchants all personally supervise their handling. They come to us fresh from the Shenandoah Valley, but we don't take any chances—we do our own candling to make sure that they're up to the standards of our very discriminating clientele. And so it should be—we try to live up to our reputation for fine quality foods for Washington.

MANY OF our meat stands supervise the butchering and preparation of all meats for their stands, too. And most of them search across the country to find the finest in good hams. They go South, West, East and North in search of the ham that "makes" the reputation of a hostess.

WE WANTED to give you the recipe for a delightful Olive Roll before Easter, but since we were so cramped for space, we've held it. It's wonderful with seafood and eggs, so it makes no difference if we are late—it's still good:

Make your standard biscuit recipe using 2 cups flour for these "Olive Roll Slices." Roll the dough out and spread with the delicious mixture of chopped ripe olives, cottage cheese, parsley and seasonings. Roll up like a jelly roll and cut in slices to bake. Would make a good Lenten entree with creamed eggs.

OLIVE ROLL SLICES

Baking powder biscuit dough (basis 2 cups flour)
½ cup chopped ripe olives
½ cup cottage cheese
1 tablespoon finely chopped parsley
1 teaspoon prepared horse radish
2 tablespoons mayonnaise

Roll biscuit dough into rectangular shape, ¼-inch thick. Blend together remaining ingredients and spread evenly over dough. Roll as for jelly roll. Cut crosswise into 12 slices and place cut side down on ungreased cookie sheet. Bake in very hot oven (450 degrees F.) about 15 minutes. Serve hot with creamed vegetables or as topping for meat pie.

Makes 12 rolls.
